Contents

Acknowledgments ix
Contributors x

1 General introduction: Human rights and disability – interdisciplinary perspectives 1
ALICIA OUELLETTE

1 Introduction 1
2 The challenge continues 1
3 The promise and limitations of a human rights approach 2
4 An interdisciplinary approach to understanding the promises and challenges of a human rights approach to disability 4
5 The contribution, as a whole 6
6 References 6

PART I
Human rights and disability: Different voices 7

2 Remarks on a disability-conscious bioethics 9
JOHN-STEWART GORDON

1 Introduction 9
2 The gap between bioethics and the disability rights community: Concepts, biases, and fears 10
3 On the possibility of overcoming the divide: Autonomy and personhood 15
4 Conclusions 19
5 References 19

3 Theology, disability, and human rights: Difficult past, promising future 21
JOHANN-CHRISTIAN PÕDER

1 Introduction 21
2 Theology and disability: Difficult past 21

3 Theological efforts at rethinking disability: Three examples 24
4 Theology and disability in relation to human rights and theories of justice 28
5 Theology and disability: Promising future 34
6 References 34

PART II
Human development and inclusion 37

4 Grounding disability and human rights with the capabilities approach 39
CHRISTOPHER A. RIDDLE

1 Introduction 39
2 The capabilities approach to justice 39
3 Human rights 41
4 Equality 43
5 Dignity 45
6 Autonomy 47
7 Concluding remarks 48
8 References 48

5 Human rights and persons with intellectual and developmental disabilities: An elusive but emerging paradigm 50
DONATO TARULLI, DOROTHY GRIFFITHS, AND FRANCES OWEN

1 Historical context and rationale for a rights agenda 50
2 The UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities 54
3 Making the paradigm shift 56
4 Rights education 60
5 Relationships and rights 62
6 Conclusions 65
7 References 65

6 On human rights and human duties: Is there a moral obligation to inclusion? 68
HOLGER BURCKHART AND BENNET JÄGER

1 Introduction 68
2 Inclusion: A human right 68
3 Inclusion as an area of responsibility in society as a whole 70
4 Conclusion 72
5 References 72

7 The right to inclusive education: Practical implications in German schools 74
PETR FRANTIK

1 Introduction 74
2 Preliminary remarks 75
3 Current difficulties 77
4 Promising approaches 83
5 Conclusion and final remarks 88
6 References 89

PART III
Justice and legal protection 93

8 Disability rights, legal and moral 95
HANS S. REINDERS

1 Introduction 95
2 Moral and legal rights 97
3 Signification and ratification 99
4 Promotion and protection 100
5 Liberties and claim rights 101
6 Justifiable restrictions 103
7 What rights claims can do 107
8 What disability rights cannot do 108
9 Conclusion 109
10 References 110

9 From manifesto to action: Transforming the aspiration of disability human rights into accountable government action 111
JEROME BICKENBACH

1 Introduction 111
2 The "human rights approach" and the CRPD 113
3 Ideological obstacles to fulfilling the promise of the CRPD 116
4 Transforming aspiration into accountable action 125
5 References 128

10 Human and civil models of rights: Healthy and ill disabled and access to health care 132
ANITA SILVERS AND LESLIE PICKERING FRANCIS

1 Introduction 132
2 Humanity as a basis for rights ascription 133

3 Collective agreement as a basis for rights justification 137
4 Health care rights in a civil rights frame 139
5 Group-differentiated rights and the problem of clashing models of disabilities 140
6 Disability as a medical problem 141
7 Disability as a social problem 143
8 Disability identity: Healthy versus ill? 145
9 Regarding robustness 147
10 Disability rights as civil rights 148
11 Conclusion 150
12 References 151

11 Agency and disability: A rights-based approach 154
MICHAEL BOYLAN

1 Central definitions 154
2 Environmental disability 157
3 Disability and stigma 159
4 Eliminating negative liberty and enhancing positive liberty 167
5 Community support 168
6 Conclusion 168
7 References 169

12 Afterword 171
AKIKO ITO

Bibliography 175
Index 177