Contents

New Developments Related to Nutritional Aspects of Protein in Human Milk 1
Niels C. R. Räihä

Energy Content of Breast Milk and Metabolizable Energy Intake in Breast-Fed Infants 7
A. Lucas, S. B. Roberts, G. Ewing, and W. A. Coward

Electron Microscopy and Carbohydrate Histochemistry of the Human Milk Fat Globule Membrane 27
Wolfgang Buchheim, Ulrich Welsch, and Stuart Patton

Enzymes in Milk: Their Function in the Mammary Gland, in Milk, and in the Infant 45
Margit Hamosh

Calcium, Phosphorus, and Vitamin D in Human Milk 63
B. L. Salle, J. Senterre, F. D. Glorieux, and G. Putet

Trace Elements in Human Milk 75
Lucille S. Hurley and Bo Lönnerdal

Taurine in Human Milk: Biological Significance 95
Charles E. Wright and Gerald E. Gaull

Epidermal and Neural Growth Factors in Milk: Effects of Epidermal Growth Factor on the Development of the Gastrointestinal Tract 105
Daniel Ménard and Pierre Arsenault

Possible Physiological Role of Hormones and Hormone-Related Substances Present in Milk 123
O. Koldovsky, A. Bedrick, P. Pollack, R. K. Rao, and W. Thornburg

Antiviral and Antibacterial Factors in Human Milk 141
Lars Å. Hanson, Barbro Carlsson, Fehmida Jalil, Mirjana Hahn-Zoric, Svante Hermodson, Johan Karlberg, Lotta Mellander, Shaukat Raza Khan, Bo Lindblad, Klara Thiringer, and Shakila Zaman

Antiparasitic Factors in Human Milk 159
Olle Hernell and Lars Bläckberg

Cellular Aspects of Immunologic Reactivity in Human Milk 171
P. L. Ogra and S. S. Ogra
Mucosal Immunity and the Mammary Gland 185
Jean-Pierre Kraehenbuhl, Richard Weltzin, Esther Schaerer, and Roberto Solari
Allergy Prevention: Does Maternal Food Intake During Pregnancy or Lactation Influence the Development of Atopic Disease During Infancy? 197
N.-I. Max Kjellman
Factors Controlling the Bacterial Colonization of the Neonatal Intestine 205
P. Raibaud
Concluding Remarks 221
Lars Å. Hanson
Subject Index 223