

Contents

List of Figures	ix
Acknowledgments	xiv
1 The Making of a Visual History of Children's Emotions in Europe	1
Rembrandt's Eye	1
A History of Education and Emotions	3
A Psychological Category in Historical Research	6
Concepts and Theories about Children's Emotions across Time	9
Sources and Reality	13
Interpreting the Artist's Eye	16
Part 1 Belief in the Child as Animal Educandum: Children's Emotions in the Age of Renaissance and Reformation
2 The Big Talk on Education and Emotions in the Age of Renaissance and Reformation	21
"As the Old Sing, so Pipe the Young:" A Call for Parental Responsibility	21
The Emergence of a Communication and Knowledge Society	22
About Earth and Hereafter: The Discourse on Passions and Affections	26
The Discourse Down to Earth: Visualized Lessons in Moral and Emotional Literacy	30
Adaptation of the Christian Discourse about the Emotions	35
The Educational Turn	43
A Classic Discourse in a Modernizing Emotional and Educational Space	49
3 The Expression of Children's Emotions in the Age of Renaissance and Reformation	51
Introduction: Looking through the Changing Eye of the Artist	51
The Educational Relationship: Breeding Ground for Children's and Educator's Emotions	57
In the Child's World	80
Conclusion: Child's Emotions to the Forefront	99

Notes

Bibliography

Index

4	The Birth of a Mission: Educating Emotional Literacy in the Age of Renaissance and Reformation	101
	A Mission Born	101
	Good Parenting by "Natural Instinct, Parental Love, Divine Law, and Custom"	105
	Coming of Age Properly	119
	Conclusion: A Mission by Instruction and Seduction	125
Part 2 Between Child and Education: Children's Emotions in the Age of Enlightenment, Romanticism, and Science
5	The Big Talk on Education and Emotions in the Age of Enlightenment, Romanticism, and Science	129
	From Playing to Learning: A Crucial Transition in Child's Development	129
	Educational and Emotional Space in a Continuously Modernizing Society	132
	Filling the Tabula Rasa	134
	"To Awaken and Develop ... All the Powers and Natural Gifts of the Child"	136
	The Disenchantment of the Child	139
	Complementary and Competing: The Discourse on Emotions	140
	Conclusion: A Discourse Marked by Incompatibilities	150
6	The Expression of Children's Emotions in the Age of Enlightenment, Romanticism, and Science	153
	Introduction: Looking at an Adapting, Innovating, and Almost Evaporating Source	153
	Children's Emotions within an Educational and Emotional Relationship	157
	In the Child's World	176
	Conclusion: Children's Emotions and Images of Childhood	191
7	Training Children in Emotional Literacy in the Age of Enlightenment, Romanticism, and Science	193
	Introduction	193
	Training the Emotions through a Visualized Lexicon of Emotions	194
	Crossing Turning Points of Emotional and Moral Development	197
	Conclusion: Emotion Training around Turning Points of Emotional and Moral Development	213
8	Conclusion: Changing Discourses, Continuing Emotions	215
	Notes	223
	Bibliography	275
	Index	313