

Contents

List of Illustrations	ix
List of Abbreviations	xi
Introduction	1
Writing herstory	2
At the grassroots	4
Transnational investigation	5
Personal, political, transnational	9
1. Awakenings	16
The woman question	18
From the pages	20
United States	20
United Kingdom	22
France	24
Freedoms and ripenings	26
Conclusion	29
2. Politicisation	33
After the revolution, my dear	35
1968 as rupture	35
Girls say yes	38
Global struggle	42
Conclusion	47
3. Formation	50
American beginnings, radical community	51
Homegrown British feminism	53
Année zéro	61
Conclusion	74
4. Movement	81
Personal politics	82
Building networks	90
The American movement	90
The British movement	91
The French movement	92
Transnational networks	93
Local hubs	98
First Get Your Centre	98
Not only a bookstore	101
Conclusion	109

5. Theory	116
The Second Sex	117
American readings	117
French readings	120
British readings	122
The Longest Revolution	122
American readings	122
European readings	124
Made in America	125
French readings	125
British readings	128
New French Feminisms	131
Psychoanalytic	131
Materialist	133
Conclusion	135
6. Protest	141
Unknown wives and beauty queens	143
Miss Demeanour	143
Down the Champs-Élysée	146
A woman's right to choose	148
Coalitions	149
Transnational testifying	152
Sisters in other countries	154
Local protest, transnational solidarity	159
Conclusion	161
7. Bodies	167
Raising health consciousness	168
Our Bodies, Ourselves	170
Notre corps, nous-mêmes	174
Our (British) Bodies	176
What the Boston women gave the world	180
Building bodies of knowledge	182
A box marked 'toys'	185
Dear sisters	192
Conclusion	197
8. Community	204
A people's creche	205
Battered Women Need Refuges	211
SOS Femmes	216
American shelters	218
Rape crisis	222
British Feminists Against Sexual Terrorism	226
Viol, violence	228
Conclusion	232
Conclusion	239

CONTENTS vii

Appendix: Interviewee Biographies	243
Acknowledgements	247
Bibliography	249
Index	279