

Contents

| | |
|--|-----------|
| Preface: On Waking Up | vii |
| Acknowledgments | xii |
| 1 The Anthropocene Rupture | 1 |
| A rupture in Earth history | 1 |
| Volition in nature | 5 |
| Earth System science | 9 |
| Scientific misinterpretations | 13 |
| The ecomodernist gloss | 21 |
| An epoch by any other name | 27 |
| 2 A New Anthropocentrism | 36 |
| To doubt everything | 36 |
| Anthropocentrism redux | 39 |
| The antinomy of the Anthropocene | 45 |
| The new anthropocentrism | 50 |
| The world-making creature | 58 |
| The new anthropocentrism versus ecomodernism | 66 |
| In praise of technology | 72 |

CONTENTS

| | |
|---|------------|
| 3 Friends and Adversaries | 76 |
| Grand narratives are dead, until now | 76 |
| After post-humanism | 87 |
| The freak of nature | 98 |
| The ontological wrong turn | 102 |
| Recovering the cosmological sense? | 109 |
| 4 A Planetary History | 112 |
| The significance of humans | 112 |
| Does history have a meaning? | 116 |
| An Enlightenment fable | 122 |
| “Politics is fate” | 127 |
| 5 The Rise and Fall of the Super-agent | 136 |
| Freedom is woven into nature | 136 |
| Responsibility is not enough | 145 |
| Living without Utopia | 157 |
| Notes | 163 |
| Index | 176 |