

CONTENTS

	About the author	pages ix
	Acknowledgements	x
	Guide to online resources	xi
Chapter 1	What is play?	1
	Introduction	2
	What is play?	3
	Play memories	7
	Intergenerational play memories	16
	Supporting school play	22
	Conclusion	23
	Acknowledgements	23
Chapter 2	Children's perspectives on play	24
	Introduction	25
	Understanding infants' and children's perspectives	26
	What children say about their play	32
	Creating the conditions for gaining the child's perspective	35
	Interpreting data on children's perspective	42
	Conclusion	43
Chapter 3	Families at play	44
	Introduction	45
	Historical understanding of play	46
	Learning to play	47
	Conclusion	58
	Acknowledgements	58
Chapter 4	Digital play	59
	Introduction	60
	Infants' and children's technological contexts	63
	Digital media in everyday family life	65
	Digitally amplified environments	75
	The program in action	79

	Conclusion	87
	Acknowledgements	87
Chapter 5	Playing in schools	88
	Introduction	89
	How do we support play in schools?	90
	Developmental education: A case study from the Netherlands	93
	Play-based approach	96
	A play-based inquiry approach in schools that supports learning the content of the Australian Curriculum	99
	Practical examples of support for a play-based approach in schools	102
	Conclusion	105
Chapter 6	Lenses on play: Post-structuralist and feminist analyses of children's play	106
	Introduction	107
	Post-structuralist theory of play	107
	Play in undemocratic institutions	117
	Using post-structuralism and post-humanism/new materialism in the context of children's play	121
	Conclusion	124
Chapter 7	Lenses on play: Cultural-historical conceptions of play	125
	Introduction	126
	A cultural-historical understanding of play	126
	Cultural-historical models of play	138
	Conclusion	154
	Acknowledgements	154
Chapter 8	Play in the curriculum	155
	Introduction	156
	Analysing play in the curriculum	159
	The elasticity of curricula: A case example from Australia	160
	A case example from Aotearoa New Zealand	162
	Reggio Emilia, Italy	164
	The playing learning child: A case example from Sweden	164
	Play-responsive teaching	168
	Teaching in play-based programs	170
	Conclusion	177
	Acknowledgements	177

Chapter 9	Conceptual PlayWorlds: Play-based learning and intentionality	178
	Introduction	179
	Working with concepts	179
	Introducing a Conceptual PlayWorld	181
	A pop-up Conceptual PlayWorld of Rosie's Walk	182
	A Conceptual PlayWorld for infants and toddlers	192
	Using a Conceptual PlayWorld to support children transitioning to school	196
	Planning your own Conceptual PlayWorld	198
	Conclusion	201
	Acknowledgements	201
Chapter 10	Planning for play development	202
	Introduction	203
	The relationship between play, learning and development	204
	Challenges for play, learning and development	206
	Theory of mind and play	208
	Play and imagination	209
	Planning to develop play complexity	211
	Planning play environments	213
	Supporting the youngest players: Building relationships in play	216
	Planning for the development of multiliteracies through play: A case example	219
	Conclusion	226
Chapter 11	Assessment through, of and for play	227
	Introduction	228
	Assessment through play	230
	Assessment of play	234
	Assessment for play	238
	What theory drives your play practices?	240
	Self-assessment of play practice: What theory drives your beliefs?	241
	Conclusion	247
	Acknowledgements	247
Chapter 12	Being a play activist and play leader	248
	Introduction	249
	Advocating for play	250
	Discourses	251

Taking a position: Banning play	252
Taking a position: School playground play	255
Play as a leading activity in the early years	256
Being a play leader	259
Conclusion	261
References	263
Index	276