

Contents

Preface and Acknowledgements / ix

Introduction: the welfare state in crisis / 1

The need to rethink socialist welfare / 6

The structure of the book / 9

Methodological considerations / 10

1. Socialist theory and social policy / 14

Socialist theory / 14

Socialist and communist social policy / 34

Conclusions / 41

2. Socialist societies and social policy – some theoretical considerations / 43

Socialist social policy: other views / 43

The nature of existing Socialist societies / 46

Preconditions for realisation of a transformed welfare system / 50

The six socialist countries studied / 54

3. Socialism and health: Russia and Eastern Europe / 59

Socialist medical care policy / 59

Russian medical care policy / 70

Hungarian medical care policy / 81

Polish medical care policy / 89

Conclusions / 96

4. Socialism and health: the Third World / 98

Chinese medical care policy / 98

Cuban medical care policy / 115

Mozambiquan medical care policy / 124
Conclusions / 133

5. Socialism and income maintenance / 135

Socialist income maintenance policy / 135
Russian income maintenance policy / 143
Hungarian income maintenance policy / 154
Chinese income maintenance policy / 161
Cuban income maintenance policy / 170
Conclusions / 175

6. Socialism, housing and the way of life / 177

Socialist housing policy / 177
Russian housing policy / 187
Hungarian housing policy / 199
Chinese housing policy / 208
Cuban housing policy / 217
Conclusions / 223

7. Socialist social policy: reality and prospects / 225

Apparent existence of socialist and communist forms of welfare / 225
The future of socialist and communist forms of welfare / 236

Conclusion: the struggle for a socialist social policy in Britain / 244

The requirements of a socialist strategy / 244
The limitations of existing socialist strategies / 249
Conclusion / 260
Afterword: the implications for social administrators / 265

Notes and references / 268

Bibliography / 296