

Contents

Preface	vii
List of figures	x
List of tables	xii
List of contributors	xvi

1. Nanosyntax: State of the art and recent developments 1
Karen De Clercq, Pavel Caha, Michal Starke, and Guido Vanden Wyngaerd

PART I. THE FUNCTIONAL SEQUENCE

2. Comparing Slavic comparatives 47
Anastasiia Vyshnevskia
3. Complex Left Branches in Frisian verbs 89
Fenna Bergsma, Jan Don, Anne Merkuur, and Meg Smith
4. Decomposing habituais 115
Furkan Dikmen and Ömer Demirok
5. Suppletion and affix selection in Nanosyntax: The case of Spanish numerals 137
Antonio Fábregas

PART II. PREFIXES

6. Polish prefix stacking redux 167
Bartosz Wiland
7. Complications of Complex Left Branches: The case of Dutch verbal prefixes 212
Anne-Li Demonie
8. The non-uniform nature of auxiliaries: A case study on Turkish 248
Serra Gök and Ömer Demirok

PART III. THE ALGORITHM AND SUBEXTRACTION

9. A local analysis of an apparent nonlocal allomorphy in Tamil: A perspective from Rutul 271
Pavel Caha
10. ABA patterns and the generative power of Nanosyntax 295
Daniar Kasenov
11. Syncretism and markedness paradoxes in the Russian demonstrative declension 319
Pavel Caha and Lucie Taraldsen Medová
12. The relation between theme vowels and root suppletion 358
Tarald Taraldsen

PART IV. NEW EXPLORATIONS

13. A modular approach to Phonologically Conditioned
Allomorphy: The case of the Ligurian article system 377
Tommaso Balsemin and Francesco Pinzin
14. Controlling morphosyntactic competition through phonology 411
Utku Türk
15. Lexical structure and subjunctive selection 441
Lena Baunaz and Eric Lander
16. Exponency in bilingual grammars: Conflict and compromise 466
David Natvig, Michael T. Putnam, and Emmeline Wilson
- Index* 493