

CONTENTS

|                 |   |
|-----------------|---|
| Acknowledgments | 5 |
| Prologue        | 9 |

Part One: CONFRONTATION

| Chapter |                                     | Page |
|----------------|-------------------------------------|-------------|
| I              | A Kind of Freedom                   | 15          |
| II             | 'Incompatible' . . . 'Untenable'    | 22          |
| III            | What Cosmonauts Fail to See         | 27          |
| IV             | Hard Times for Agitators            | 33          |
| V              | Mud                                 | 43          |
|                | Interlude Conversation Piece | 51          |

Part Two: FLAME ON THE STEPPES

|      |                   |    |
|------|-------------------|----|
| VI   | Michael the Serf  | 57 |
| VII  | Lord Apostol      | 65 |
| VIII | Highway of Sorrow | 69 |
| IX   | Red Surprise      | 76 |
| X    | Stalin's Winters  | 82 |

Part Three: CONFLICT

|      |                       |     |
|------|-----------------------|-----|
| XI   | The Citadel           | 91  |
| XII  | Advance From Strength | 102 |
| XIII | Hammer and Cross      | 110 |
| XIV  | Red Army Christians?  | 120 |

|       |                                                |     |
|-------|------------------------------------------------|-----|
| XV    | 'Suffer Little Children . . .'                 | 126 |
| XVI   | Why Inna, Vitaly and Roza Held TheirBreath | 135 |
| XVII  | Where are the Catacombs?                       | 142 |
| XVIII | Beyond the Law                                 | 148 |
| XIX   | Tightening the Screw                           | 154 |
| XX    | Criminals in the Dock                          | 162 |
|       | Interlude When Khrushchev Studies       | 169 |
| XXI   | The Flight of the Thirty Two                   | 172 |
| XXII  | The Cry of the Thirty Two                      | 180 |
|       | References and Sources                         | 187 |