
Contents

	Page
Introduction by Karen I. Vaughn	ix
Translator's Note	xxxix
Author's Preface	xli
1. Statement of the Problem—Earlier Treatment of the Subject—Possibility of “Objective” Discussion	1
2. Definitions and Assumptions	17
3. Procedure—Additional Assumptions—The Aim of Social Economic Activity	34
4. Calculation in Socialist Societies with a Natural Economy	50
5. The Possibility of Economic Calculation in Marxist-Communist Communities	81
6. Money and the Formation of Prices of Consumer Goods in a Socialist Society with Free Choice of Goods and Occupation	101
7. Reserves, Profit and Risk in the Socialist State	129
8. Interest in the Socialist Society	143
9. Rent in the Socialist Society	189
10. Depreciation in the Socialist Society	196

11.	Mises' Theory. Proposed Solutions: Mathematical Solutions and the "Experimental Method"	202
12.	Other Solutions, Marginal Costs as Criteria ..	224
13.	Other Suggested Solutions: Competition in the Socialist Community	237
14.	Economic Calculation in a Socialist Society Where There Is Free Choice of Goods or Occupation	258
15.	Resumé and Conclusions	287

Appendices

A.	The Price-Mechanism in a Private Capitalist Society	296
B.	Alleged Defects of Capitalist Societies and the Chances of Eliminating Them in Socialist Societies	311
C.	A Comparison between our Conclusions and Experiences in Soviet Russia	341
	Bibliography	391
	Index	401
	Biographical Note	407