

CONTENTS

NOTES ON THE AUTHORS	ix
SERIES FOREWORD	xv
PREFACE	xix

1. INFORMATION SYSTEMS: AN EMERGING DISCIPLINE? - INTRODUCTION	1
---	----------

Frank Stowell and John Mingers

1.1. Introduction	1
1.2 The Emergence from Computer Science	2
1.3 Is Information Systems a Distinctive Discipline?	5
1.4 Outline of the Book	12

PART 1: PHILOSOPHICAL ISSUES	17
-------------------------------------	-----------

2. THE ACTUALITY OF INFORMATION SYSTEMS	21
--	-----------

Stephen Probert

2.1 Introduction	21
2.2 Arguments against IS as a Discipline	24
2.3 The Reality of Information Systems	35
2.4 Towards a New Paradigm for IS Research	40
2.5 Conclusion	57

3. DISCIPLINE AND CRITIQUE: THE CASE OF INFORMATION SYSTEMS	63
--	-----------

Martin Spaul

3.1 Introduction	63
3.2 Academia and a Science of Information	65
3.3 Convergence, Expertise and Disciplines	76
3.4 'Supradisciplinarity' and the Nomadic Intellectual	86
3.5 Concluding Remarks	91

4. IT ALL DEPENDS WHAT YOU MEAN BY DISCIPLINE ...	97
--	-----------

Matthew Jones

4.1 Introduction	97
4.2 What Sort of Discipline is IS?	100

CONTENTS

4.3 What Unifies IS?	103
4.4 The Distinctive Character of IS	105
4.5 An Alternative Perspective	107
4.6 Conclusions	109
5. THE 'DISCIPLINE' OF INFORMATION SYSTEMS: TEACHING, RESEARCH, AND PRACTICE	113
David Avison
5.1 Background	113
5.2 The Domain of Information Systems	115
5.3 Information Systems Teaching	117
5.4 Information Systems Research	119
5.5 Information Systems Practice	124
5.6 Potential Difficulties of this Multi-Disciplinarity	127
5.7 Conclusion	131
PART 2: RESEARCH ISSUES	137
6. REFLECTIONS ON INFORMATION SYSTEMS RESEARCH: TWELVE POINTS OF DEBATE	141
Robert Galliers
6.1 Introduction	141
6.2 Background	142
6.3 Topic Selection	143
6.4 The Question of Quality: Relevance or Rigour?	147
6.5 Methodological Choice	149
6.6 Towards a Revised Framework	153
6.7 Concluding Remarks	154
7. ACTION RESEARCH AS A FRAMEWORK FOR IS RESEARCH	159
Frank Stowell, Daune West and Mark Stansfield
7.1 Introduction	159
7.2 The Role of Action Research in Social Inquiry	160
7.3 Three Experiences of Using Action Research for Information Systems Research	165
7.4 Two Action Research Scenarios	174
7.5 Reflections	192

8. CRITICAL SYSTEMS THINKING AND INFORMATION SYSTEMS RESEARCH 201

Michael C. Jackson

8.1 Introduction	201
8.2 Systems Thinking as a Theoretical Prop	202
8.3 The Critical Systems Turn	210
8.4 Critical Thinking and Information Systems Research	216
8.5 Critical Thinking and Information Systems Development: A Case Study	221
8.6 Conclusion	232

9. INTERPRETIVE RESEARCH IN INFORMATION SYSTEMS 239

Michael Myers

9.1 Introduction	239
9.2 The Nature of Interpretive Research	240
9.3 The Applicability of Interpretive Research	242
9.4 Interpretive Field Research	244
9.5 Critical Hermeneutics	247
9.6 Examples of Interpretive Research	254
9.7 Evaluating Interpretive Research Manuscripts	256
9.8 Conclusion	258

10. ORGANISATIONAL SEMIOTICS 267

Ronald Stamper

10.1 Introduction	267
10.2 Why Semiotics? The Sign as a First Primitive Concept	268
10.3 Technical Properties of Signs	270
10.4 Social Properties of Signs	272
10.5 The Semiotic Framework	275
10.6 Organisations as Information Systems: The Norm as a Second Primitive Concept	276
10.7 A Hard View of Soft Systems	279
10.8 The Diversity of Organisational Semiotics	281

PART 3: PRACTICE AND EDUCATION 285

11. FACTORS INFLUENCING THE SUCCESS OF STRATEGIC INFORMATION SYSTEMS 287

Paul McGolpin and John Ward

11.1 Introduction	287
-------------------	-----

CONTENTS

11.2 An Overview of the Research	289
11.3 The Search	296
11.4 The Findings	306
11.5 Conclusions	317
11.6 Other Conclusions	324
12. SOME REFLECTIONS ON INFORMATION SYSTEMS CURRICULA	329
Brent Work
12.1 Is an Official Information Systems Curriculum Really Necessary?	329
12.2 What is the Distinctive View of Information Systems?	332
12.3 The Liberal Nature of Information Systems	341
12.4 A New Structure for Liberal Education	348
PART 4: CONCLUSIONS: THE FUTURE?	361
13. WELCOME TO THE 'BRAVE NEW WORLD'	363
Ian O. Angell
13.1 Introduction	363
13.2 The Madness of the Age	365
13.3 Why Information Systems Security is so Important	375
13.4 A Strategy for Success?	378
INDEX	385