

Contents

Method of Citation	ix
1. Introduction	1
2. The Creation	12
Logical and Real Possibility	13
God Necessarily Creates the Best Really Possible World	16
Divine Freedom and the Holy Will	24
3. Is God Free?	28
Is the Divine Nature External or Internal to the Divine Will?	29
Are Goodness and Rationality External or Internal to the Divine Nature?	37
God, Freedom, and Contingency: Rae Langton's Alternative Interpretation	47
A Framing Interpretative Question: What Is the Problem with Freedom?	56
4. The Problem	58
Kant's Pre-Critical Compatibilism	61
Kant Reads Rousseau	67
Kant on Created Freedom in The Only Possible Argument (1763)	70
The Silent Decade: the 1770s	73
Karl Ameriks's 'Argument from Restraint'	78
Is Transcendental Freedom Necessary for Perfect Freedom?	79
Patrick Kain on the Coherence of Kant's Account of Divine and Human Freedom	85
The Fundamental Theological Question: Is God an Alien and External Cause?	86
5. The Solution	90
The Interpretation of Transcendental Idealism	92
Noumenal First Causation	104
Pure and Phenomenal Substance	112
A Question of Plausibility	119
6. Incoherence	121
The Plausibility of Atemporal First Causation	122
The Origin of Evil and the Incoherence of Noumenal First Causation	127

7. Belief	135
The Impossibility of Theoretical Knowledge about God and Noumenal Freedom	137
Practical Warrant for Knowledge of Freedom and Belief in God	139
Non-Moral Grounds for Doctrinal Belief in God	143
The Rationalist Conception of God in Kant's Critical Philosophy	144
Kant's Realism about God and Noumenal Freedom	149
Belief and Acceptance	152
Opinion, Belief or Faith, and Knowledge	154
The Case for Belief-in-Truth	157
The Case for Mere Acceptance-as-True	162
Belief in God 'Can Therefore often Waver': Towards the Opus Postumum	167
8. Creating the Kingdom of Ends	172
Appearances are not Creations	173
Kant's Argument from Divine Impassibility to Transcendental Idealism	176
The Kingdom of Ends	178
Schleiermacher, Transcendental Freedom, and Absolute Dependence upon God	186
A Theological Distinction: Creation and Production	189
9. Concurrence	192
Occasionalism, Mere Conservation, and Concurrence	194
Kant on Concurrence in Nature	203
Concurrence and Freedom	214
Concurrence and Compatibilism	218
Concurrence and the Shift in Kant's Account of Created Freedom	221
10. Legacy	224
The Debate around Concurrentism: Grammarians and Theoreticians	225
Recent Theological Reception of Kant: An 'Affirmative' Trend	229
Grace and Atonement	233
The Final Twist: Kant as Concurrentist	240
Bibliography	245
Index	257