

Contents

Acknowledgements	page ix
-------------------------	---------

Introduction: The Historian, Critical Race Theory and Audience Racism in Twentieth-Century Britain	1
--	---

I.1 Not Seeing Racism: Critical Race Theory and Histories of Not Knowing	8
I.2 Film, Television and the Racially Innocent Audience	17
I.3 Archives of Not Knowing	23

1 Discovering the Audience: Anxieties and Expertise	30
1.1 The Anxieties of Screen Culture	36
1.2 The Rise of Audience Experts	44
1.3 Not Knowing Black and South Asian Audiences	60

2 Audience Wants: Film and the Pleasures of Racism, 1900–1945	63
2.1 The Pleasures of Racism: Empire Films in the Early Twentieth Century	69
2.2 Documentary and Amateur Film: The Imagined ‘Curiosity’ of White Audiences	78
2.3 Counter Story-telling: Audiences of Colour and Empire Films	84
2.4 Wartime Understandings	88

3 ‘Expressing Their Own Point of View’: Television Audience Research on ‘Race’ at the BBC, 1950–1968	95
3.1 Race Relations in Africa (1952)	101
3.2 Audience Responses to Rainbow City and Till Death Us Do Part	114

4 ‘A Traditional Form of Entertainment’: Colour-blind Audiences and Blacking Up on Post-war Screens	128
4.1 Family Viewing on the Big and Small Screens	136
4.2 The Campaign Against Racial Discrimination (CARD) and The Black and White Minstrel Show	142
4.3 Rangī Ram and ‘The Black and White Minstrels from Jockey Mead’	154
4.4 The End of The Black and White Minstrel Show	157

5 ‘Too Touchy’: Black Audiences and the Racialised Everyday in the Post-war Black ‘Glossies’	164
5.1 Voices of Colour and Black Agency	167
5.2 A ‘Short-lived Fate’: Black Glossies and Post-war Publishing	171

5.3	'Anti-White': Navigating White Readers	176
5.4	Racialised Emotions	184
5.5	Knowing Black Success	188
6	'A Sneaking Feeling': Institutional Silences, Racism and Audience Research at the BBC and ITV in the 1970s	194
6.1	Growing Evidence: Audience Research on Racial Prejudice 1970–1978	199
6.2	Audiences of Colour in the BBC's and IBA's Audience Research	211
7	'Black Magic': Racially Comfortable Viewing on British Television in the 1980s and 1990s	229
7.1	Viewing in Comfort: The Cosby Show and Colour-blindness in 1980s Britain	237
7.2	Desmond's	248
7.3	The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air	254
	Conclusion: 'Of the Time'	261
	Bibliography	274
	Index	287