Contents

List of contributors viii
Foreword by Nina Eichacker xiii
Preface by Lynne Chester xv

Introduction: revealing the unrecognized and under-valued contributions of women heterodox economists 1
Lynne Chester

PART I WHY WOMEN ARE HETERODOX ECONOMISTS

Introduction to Part I: Why women are heterodox economists 20
Alexandra Bernasek

1 Working at the intersection of Financial and Feminist Economics 22
Alicia Girón

2 My journey as a heterodox economist: from the origins of money to degrowth 39
Alla Semenova

3 Being a heterodox economist as a feminist one 53
Marcella Corsi

4 Becoming a feminist institutionalist 66
Janice Peterson

5 Labour, imperialism, and finance: my journey as an economist 81
Ramaa Vasudevan

6 Tracing money: from personal history to abstract economics 93
Ann E. Davis

7 Gender and the Sri Lankan debt crisis: why feminist perspectives matter 107
Kanchana N. Ruwanpura

8 Reflections on epistemic injustice by a Régulationist 121
Lynne Chester

9 Gender, class, and African development: reflections on my path to heterodox economics 138
Lynda Pickbourn

10 Navigating the post-socialist transition: institutionalist Post-Keynesianism as a counter to neoliberal disaster 152
Anna Klimina

PART II THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF WOMEN TO HETERODOX ECONOMICS

Introduction to Part II: The contributions of women to heterodox economics 169
Alexandra Bernasek

11 Bridging theory and praxis: the legacy of Heidi Hartmann 171
Deborah M. Figart and Ellen Mutari

12 Barbara Bergmann's scholarship on the economic risks of being a housewife 186
Sarah F. Small and Jade Ramirez-Barraza

13 The rise and rise of feminist macroeconomics: who's recognizing? 201
Günseli Berik and Ebru Kongar

14 Sadie T.M. Alexander: Black women and a "taste of freedom in the economic world" 217
Nina Banks

15 We are economists: Black women's contribution to the dismal science 230
Sophie G. Pinkston and Rhonda Vonshay Sharpe

16 Swimming against the tide: Anne Mayhew and Edythe Miller 250
Dell P. Champlin and Janet T. Knoedler

17 Feminist Institutionalism 264
Maríndia Brites

18 J.K. Gibson-Graham: rethinking economic diversity, transformation, and community 279
Esra Erdem

19 How (un)productive is reproductive labour? Feminist political economists on capitalism's household economy 295
Sirisha C. Naidu

20 The contributions of women to Post-Keynesian Economics and Post-Keynesian Institutionalism 308
Anna Zachorowska-Mazurkiewicz

21 Body and planet: re-embedding and re-embodying the economy 321
Molly Scott Cato

PART III WOMEN ADVANCING HETERODOX ECONOMICS

Introduction to Part III: Women advancing heterodox economics 335
Alexandra Bernasek

22 An intellectual journey to theorizing motherhood in heterodox economics 337
Elaine Agyemang Tontoh

23 Being feminist economists today: identities, challenges, and responses 352
Giulia Zacchia, Rebeca Gomez Betancourt and Naomi Friedman-Sokuler

24 Climate justice, decolonization, and decarbonization 366
Alexandra Arntsen

25 At the frontier of economic development: researching gender and institutional change in fragile environments 381
Holly Ritchie

26 From crises to community: reflections on scholarship, pedagogy, and pluralism in heterodox household finance 397
Melanie G. Long

27 Social reproduction: theory and practice 412
Serap Saritas

28 Economics for all: time to tackle gendered constraints 425
Ariane Agunsoye

29 The influence of Kalecki's theory of the firm on my heterodoxy 440
Nobantu Mbeki

30 Reflections about the state and development strategies in peripheral capitalism 454
Emilia Ormaechea

31 Understanding discrimination: the role of qualitative and historical methods 469
Danielle Guizzo and Bárbara Morais

Conclusion: the unmasked contributions of women heterodox economists enrich and advance heterodox economics 483
Alexandra Bernasek

Index 499