

Contents

Introduction	7
1. Test methods	9
Readers' preferences
Continuous reading
The search task
Visual accuracy threshold
2. Understanding reading	21
Letter identification
Word superiority effect
Word wholes
Parts, wholes and context
3. Legibility in history	31
4. Theories on letter structure	37
Edward Johnston
Gerrit Noordzij
Frank E. Blokland
5. Stroke and contrast in history	47
The Old Style stroke
Romain du Roi
The Baskerville stroke
The Didone stroke
The geometric stroke
6. The individual letter	69
Internal letter relations
Scientific results
Designers' ideas
7. Type for text sizes	85
Block text
Proportions
The M-formula
Ink and printing
Type for screen
Scaling
8. Type for distance viewing	105
Compensation for loss of details
Proportions
9. The capitals	113
Roman inscriptions
Relative width
Which is more legible?
10. Sans or serif?	123
Arguments in favour of the serif
Scientific findings
Familiarity of the sans serif
11. Hanging and ranging numerals	131
12. The italic evolution	137
The Cancelleresca italic
The development of the Didone italic
Cursive italic & sloped roman
13. Letter spacing	149
14. Familiarity in history	155
Reading and writing in the Middle Ages
Blackletter and Latin types
The Civilité type
John Baskerville and his peers
Didone and the French Revolution
15. The validation of legibility	171
Index	178

