SUMMARY OF CONTENTS

Detailed chapter contents		vii
List of figures		xii
List of tables		xv
Acknowledgements		xvi
About the authors		xviii
Foreword		xix
About the companion website		xx
Guided tour		xxi
Preface		xxiii
PART 1 PSYCHOLOGICAL PERSPECTIVES ON EDUCATION		1
1	Psychological perspectives on education: classical approaches	3
2	Psychological perspectives on education: developing approaches	25
3	The effective teacher	45
4	The philosophy and psychology of professional practice	67
PART 2 THE INDIVIDUAL LEARNER		81
5	The individual learner: neurological and physical development of the learner	83
6	The individual learner: perceptual and cognitive development of the learner	111
7	The individual learner: social, emotional development and personality	136
PART 3 MEETING THE NEEDS OF THE LEARNER		165
8	Meeting the needs of the learner: the self	167
9	Meeting the needs of the learner: enabling individual success	189
10	Meeting the needs of the learner: motivation	219
11	Meeting the needs of the learner: an integrated approach	239

PART 4 CLASSROOM PRACTICE 255

12 Empowering the learner: psychological skills development 257
13 The learning environment 279
14 The 'ideal' teacher 300
15 Reflective position: integrating the strands of this book 319

References 325
Index 354

DETAILED CHAPTER CONTENTS

1 Psychological perspectives on education: classical approaches 3

1.1 Introduction 4
1.2 Perspectives in psychology 4
1.3 The roots of psychology and paradigm shifts 7
1.4 Animism 7
1.5 Rationalism or Cartesian Dualism 7
1.6 Empiricism 8
1.7 Structuralism versus functionalism 9
1.8 Psychodynamic perspective 10
1.9 Behaviourist perspective 12
1.10 Humanistic perspective 15
1.11 Cognitive perspective 18
1.12 Psychobiological perspective 20
1.13 Evolutionary perspective 21
1.14 Summarising interactionism from an applied perspective 23
1.15 Conclusion 23
1.16 Further reading 24

2 Psychological perspectives on education: developing approaches 25

2.1 Introduction 26
2.2 Positive psychology 26
2.3 School-based research within positive psychology 28
2.4 Flow 29
2.5 Developing flow in the classroom 31
2.6 Classroom studies on flow 34
2.7 The future of positive psychology related to education 35
2.8 Transpersonal psychology 36
2.9 Transpersonal education 38
2.10 Conclusion 43
2.11 Further reading 44

3 The effective teacher 45

3.1 Introduction 46
3.2 What is meant by effective? 46
3.3 An effective teacher: What do learners think? 48

3.4 An effective teacher: What do researchers think? 55
3.5 A synthesis between the learner and researcher perspectives 59
3.6 Seven habits of highly effective teachers 60
3.7 Conclusion 66
3.8 Further reading 66

4 The philosophy and psychology of professional practice 67
4.1 Introduction 67
4.2 Philosophy and psychology 68
4.3 Philosophy and education 70
4.4 Heuristics 72
4.5 Reflective practice 73
4.6 Putting the pieces together 77
4.7 Conclusion 80
4.8 Further reading 80

5 The individual learner: neurological and physical development of the learner 83
5.1 What is development? 84
5.2 Physical development in the developing child 85
5.3 Development of the brain 86
5.4 Hemispheric lateralisation and localisation of function 94
5.5 Communication between neurons 98
5.6 Development of the motor system 99
5.7 Conclusion 109
5.8 Further reading 109

6 The individual learner: perceptual and cognitive development of the learner 111
6.1 Introduction 112
6.2 Perceptual development 112
6.3 Cognitive development in the developing child 118
6.4 Attention, concentration and memory 124
6.5 Conclusion 134
6.6 Further reading 134

7 The individual learner: social, emotional development and personality 136
7.1 Introduction 137
7.2 Social development in the developing child 137
7.3 Emotional development in the developing child 141
7.4 Personality 150
7.5 Conclusion 162
7.6 Further reading 163

8 Meeting the needs of the learner: the self 167
8.1 Introduction 168
8.2 The self 169
8.3 The 'self-as-I' 170
8.4 The 'self-as-me' 173
8.5 Integration of the 'I' and 'me' 175
8.6 Roberto Assagioli and psychosynthesis 176
8.7 Psychosynthesis and education 176
8.8 Ken Wilber and AQAL 178
8.9 Metacognition 180
8.10 Self-image and self-esteem 180
8.11 Self-efficacy 182
8.12 Self-attribution 185
8.13 Nurturing the self 187
8.14 Conclusion 187
8.15 Further reading 188

9 Meeting the needs of the learner: enabling individual success 189
9.1 Introduction 190
9.2 The traditional perspective on individual children 191
9.3 Clarifying terms 193
9.4 Autistic spectrum disorders (ASD) 194
9.5 Dyslexia or specific learning difficulties (SpLD) 198
9.6 Attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) 206
9.7 Speech, language and communication needs (SLCN) 210
9.8 Behavioural, emotional and social difficulties (BESD) 213
9.9 Moderate learning difficulties (MLD) 214
9.10 Gifted and talented 215
9.11 Inclusion 216
9.12 A revised focus for practice 217
9.13 Conclusion 217
9.14 Further reading 218

10 Meeting the needs of the learner: motivation 219
10.1 Introduction 220
10.2 What is motivation? 221
10.3 Psychological perspectives on motivation 222
10.4 Behavioural perspective on motivation 222
10.5 Humanistic perspective 228
10.6 Self-determination theory 231
10.7 Conclusion 237
10.8 Further reading 238

11 Meeting the needs of the learner: an integrated approach 239
11.1 Introduction 240
11.2 The macro-perspective: an overlap of themes 240
11.3 The micro-perspective: affecting individuals on a positive level 243
11.4 Positive and negative 245
11.5 Solution-focused approaches 246
11.6 Cognitive behavioural therapy 250
11.7 Keeping to the positive 251
11.8 Conclusion 252
11.9 Further reading 253

12 Empowering the learner: psychological skills development 257
12.1 Introduction 258
12.2 Initial steps: identifying muscle-to-mind or mind-to-muscle needs 258
12.3 Relaxation: explanation, process and application 259
12.4 Progressive muscle relaxation 260
12.5 Autogenic training 260
12.6 Mental imagery: explanation, process and application 262
12.7 Goal-setting 267
12.8 Cognitive restructuring 273
12.9 Mental resilience 275
12.10 Conclusion 277
12.11 Further reading 278

13 The learning environment 279
13.1 Introduction 280
13.2 The psychology of classroom layouts 282
13.3 Age and gender differences 283
13.4 The psychology of colour 284
13.5 The psychology of typefaces 284
13.6 Learning styles 285
13.7 Structure, order and ownership 288
13.8 Learning climates 289
13.9 Behaviour management? 290
13.10 To praise or not to praise? 296
13.11 Conclusion 298
13.12 Further reading 298

14 The 'ideal' teacher 300
14.1 Introduction 301
14.2 The relationship between teaching and learning 302
14.3 The qualities of an 'ideal' teacher 304

14.4 Theoretical perspectives on the ideal teacher: a review 306
14.5 Teacher personality 310
14.6 Teacher reflection 314
14.7 Conclusion 317
14.8 Further reading 318

15 Reflective position: integrating the strands of this book 319
15.1 Introduction 320
15.2 Why does psychology matter for teachers? 320
15.3 Maintaining a critical mind 322
15.4 Solutions to predicaments 323
15.5 Employability 323
15.6 Final words 324
15.7 Further reading 324