Part One—Types of Information

1	Human communication as a theme for psychological study	15
2	Artificial and human communication systems	21
3	The growth of communication theory	24
4	The human being as an element in an artificial system	30
5	The central nervous system as a transmitter of information	35
6	Information as uncertainty reduction	41
7	Information as content	45
8	Hybrid information	48
9	Information theory as model and as paradigm	51
10	Closed and open systems	56
11	The role of language in communication	59
12	The communication of affective experience	65
13	Three broad categories of information	70
14	Scientific statement and artistic expression as the main specialist categories	74

Part Two—Barriers to Human Communication

15	The seven barriers named	84
16	Limitation of the receiver's capacity	85
17	Distraction	88

18	The unstated assumption	91
19	Incompatibility of schemas	96
20	Influence of unconscious and partly conscious mechanisms	107
21	Confused presentation	111
22	Absence of communication channels	116
23	Instances of failure described and discussed	118

Part Three—Communication Problems in Complex Activities

24	Personnel selection	129
25	Literary criticism	134
26	Education and training	140
27	Communication and military decision	143
28	The administration of law	148
29	Medicine	152
30	Scientific research	156
31	Creative art	162
32	Personal relationships	168
33	Is any experience essentially incommunicable?	172

Part Four—Communication as an Area of Psychological Research

34	Scientific method as an evolutionary process	179
35	Psychology and the physical sciences	182
36	The dangers of mechanomorphism	185
37	Research on sign communication	189
38	Research in the communication of cognitive content	202
39	Research in the communication of affective experience	212
40	Summary and conclusions	218
	Glossary	227
	Bibliography	233
	Index	241
