

CONTENTS

Preface	7
Horace Newcomb
Chapter 1 The Age of Television	11
Seeing far, going far
1. Transitions	11
2. A domesticated medium	13
3. A dual sense of place	17
4. Broadcasting and narrowcasting	20
Chapter 2 Theories of the Medium	27
Flow, glance, gaze
1. Multiple conceptions of television	27
2. History and critique of the flow	30
3. The glance and the gaze	36
Chapter 3 Televised Ceremonies	43
The double coronation of Mother Teresa of Calcutta
1. The theory of media events	43
2. The global celebrity of a 'living saint'	47
3. Two coronations	50
4. The Catholic imagination	51
5. The televisual biography	53
6. A new television event	54

Chapter 4	The Digital Revolution	59
	Other ways of watching television
	1. A medium in the making	59
	2. Instances of historical amnesia and technological utopia	63
	3. A televisual landscape without homogeneity	66
	4. From forum to library	68
Chapter 5	Storytelling	71
	The multiple realities of television fiction
	1. The television 'super-narrator'	71
	2. The possible worlds of narrative imagination	73
	3. Different life-worlds	75
	4. Widened horizons of mediated experiences	77
Chapter 6	The Paradigm of Indigenization	85
	Beyond media imperialism
	1. Paradigms revealed	85
	2. Going native	88
	3. Supply: the media are American	91
	4. Consumption: the tree hides the forest	94
	5. Influences: the audience adopts and adapts	98
Chapter 7	Travelling Narratives	101
	International flows of television: from threat to resource
	1. Imagination and otherness	101
	2. Travelling narratives	106
	3. The neutralized threat	109
	4. The case of Europe	112
Chapter 8	Stopping Time	119
	Life strategies in the formulae of television series and serials
	1. The elemental structures of seriality	119
	2. Going back to the origins of the formulae	122
	3. The theatre of immortality	125
	4. The 'frame story' of the Arabian Nights	128
	5. The story is there, just like life	130
	Bibliography	133
	Names Index	143