
Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction 1

- 1 Collecting, Classifying, and Interpreting Nature: Linnaeus and Buffon, 1735–1788 6
- 2 New Specimens: Transforming Natural History into a Scientific Discipline, 1760–1840 22
- 3 Comparing Structure: The Key to the Order of Nature, 1789–1848 37
- 4 New Tools and Standard Practices, 1840–1859 46
- 5 Darwin's Synthesis: The Theory of Evolution, 1830–1882 56
- 6 Studying Function: An Alternative Vision for the Science of Life, 1809–1900 72
- 7 Victorian Fascination: The Golden Age of Natural History, 1880–1900 87
- 8 New Synthesis: The Modern Theory of Evolution, 1900–1950 100
- 9 The Naturalist as Generalist: E. O. Wilson, 1950–1994 109

Epilogue 119

Suggested Further Reading 123

Index 131