

Table of Contents

List of principal abbreviations	15
I. Introduction	19
II. The right to regulate: general observations	32
A. The right to regulate: what's in a name...	33
B. ... and what's not in the name	35
1. Limiting the scope of investment protection	35
2. Deference afforded at tribunal discretion	40
3. Clarifications and interpretative statements	42
4. Doing away with investor-state dispute settlement	45
5. Elimination of the umbrella clause	48
6. Exceptions versus reservations	50
C. Concluding remarks	52
III. The right to regulate in context	53
A. The pre-modern-investment-world regime	53
B. WTO law, EU law and the European Convention on Human Rights	56
C. Some developments at the bilateral level	58
D. Developments at the plurilateral level: the Trans-Pacific Partnership Agreement	61
E. Developments at the collective level: the right to regulate and European investment agreements	62
F. Concluding remarks	66
IV. The rationale for inserting a right to regulate	67
A. Arbitration as a perceived threat to state regulatory freedom	67
B. Policy space as a remedy to a systemic imbalance	72
C. Concluding remarks	75

- V. Types of regulatory interests
  - A. General observations
  - B. Essential security interests
    - 1. General observations on essential security interests
    - 2. Essential security interests, economic crises and economic security
    - 3. Essential security interests and access to strategic industries
    - 4. Essential interests
    - 5. International peace and security
    - 6. Circumstances of extreme emergency
  - C. Public order (ordre public)
  - D. Regulation in the public interest
  - E. Concluding remarks
- VI. Positive language on regulatory interests
  - A. Positive language
  - B. 'Declaratory' right to regulate
  - C. The right to regulate and the preamble
  - D. Concluding remarks
- VII. The right to regulate in IIAs
  - A. General observations
  - B. The right to regulate in the respective standards of treatment
    - 1. General remarks
    - 2. The right to regulate and the contingent standards of treatment: most-favoured-nation treatment and national treatment
      - i. General observations
      - ii. The REIO exception in the contingent standards
      - iii. Idiosyncratic exceptions to the non-discrimination standards
      - iv. Non-extension of the MFN treatment to ISDS
      - v. The right to regulate and the 'in like circumstances' formula
    - 3. The right to regulate and the fair and equitable treatment, the minimum standard of treatment and full protection and security

4. The right to regulate and expropriation	148
i. The right to regulate and expropriation in general	148
ii. Exception to the expropriation standard modelled on the ECHR – A consideration de lege ferenda ?	152
5. The right to regulate and the free transfer of capital	155
i. Exceptions relating to bankruptcy, securities' trading, criminal offences, compliance with adjudicatory proceedings and the soundness of financial institutions	155
ii. Temporary derogations in case of balance-of-payments crises and difficulties for monetary and exchange rate policies	157
iii. The REIO exception and capital transfers (EU/BIT Judgments-related exception)	159
6. The right to regulate and performance requirements	164
7. The right to regulate and provisions on compensation for losses	166
C. The right to regulate as a general regulatory clause (or general exceptions applicable to the entire treaty)	169
1. General remarks	169
2. General regulatory clauses and the public interest ('General exceptions' modelled after Article XX GATT or the right to regulate by subject: the public interest)	173
i. General exceptions clauses modelled after Article XX GATT	173
ii. Relevance of GATT/WTO jurisprudence	177
iii. Relevance of general exceptions clauses modelled after Article XX GATT to specific standards of treatment and regulatory interests	179
a. Expropriation	180
b. National and most-favoured-nation treatment	182
c. Fair and equitable treatment, minimum standard of treatment and full protection and security	184
d. Transfers of capital	186
e. Performance requirements	186
f. The chapeau (or equivalent) and national security exceptions	186
D. Concluding remarks	188

- VIII. The nexus requirement, self-judging clauses and the standard of review of exceptions
  - A. The nexus requirement
  - B. 'The State considers' – Self-Judging clauses
    - 1. General
    - 2. The standard of review of self-judging clauses
  - C. The standard of review in the absence of a self-judging clause
  - D. Concluding remarks
- IX. The right to regulate by subject
  - A. Essential security interests
  - B. Taxation
  - C. Cultural diversity
    - 1. Introduction
    - 2. The exception for cultural diversity
    - 3. Considerations for cultural policy outside the stricto sensu investment context
    - 4. Cultural exception, exception for cultural policy and the investment law context
      - i. The Multilateral Agreement on Investment and the exception for culture
      - ii. France and 'the framework of measures designed to preserve and promote cultural and linguistic diversity'
      - iii. The European Union and the promotion of cultural diversity
      - iv. The Canadian approach: carving cultural industries out of the scope of the agreement
  - D. Concluding remarks
- X. The right to regulate beyond IIAs in general international law
  - A. The right to regulate under customary international law as reflected in the ILC Articles
    - 1. General
    - 2. Necessity
      - i. Necessity and the criteria for its successful invocation

ii. Practical availability of the necessity defence	254
iii. Does customary international law provide a national security defence?	255
3. Force majeure and distress	257
4. Legal nature and effects of upholding a defence under the ILC Articles	258
i. Legal nature and operation of the defence	259
ii. Compensation	263
5. ILC defences and the right to regulate. Some further reflections	265
B. Ius cogens	270
C. The clausula rebus sic stantibus and bribery	272
D. Concluding remarks	273
XI. Arbitral jurisprudence on the right to regulate (beyond IIAs and general international law) and the question of an implicit right to regulate	275
A. General observations	275
B. Arbitral jurisprudence and the legitimate interests of the host state (examination by standard)	276
1. The fair and equitable treatment	276
2. Expropriation	281
3. Concluding remarks	288
C. The protection of essential security interests in the absence of an express treaty-based right to regulate	290
D. Are explicit treaty exceptions necessary to reserve policy space?	293
E. Is an explicit treaty-based right to regulate harmful to regulatory freedom?	294
F. Concluding remarks	296
VI. Conclusion	298
Bibliography	305
Index of cases	331
Index of legislation	337
Index of treaties	339
Index	375