Contents

List of illustrations viii
Preface to the second edition ix
Acknowledgements xii

1 Introduction: state, civil society and external interests 1
Why study African politics? 1
The multiple political systems of Africa 3
The book's thematic approach 3
State, civil society and external interests 4

2 History: Africa's pre-colonial and colonial inheritance 7
The pre-colonial inheritance 8
The colonial inheritance 11
State and civil society 21
Case study: Kenya's historical inheritance 23

3 Ideology: nationalism, socialism, populism and state capitalism 31
Decolonisation in Africa 32
Nationalism 35
African nationalism 36
The differing ideological shades of African nationalism 37
State and civil society 44
Case study: socialism and ujamaa in Tanzania 50

4 Ethnicity and religion: 'tribes', gods and political identity 59
Definitions of ethnicity 60
The creation of 'tribes' 61
Ethnicity as a method of modern political mobilisation 64
Religion and African politics 67

State and civil society 71
Case study: ethnicity and the nation-state in Nigeria 73

5 Social class: the search for class politics in Africa 82
Marx on social class 83
The problems of exporting Marx to Africa 84
The African mode of production 85
A more flexible look at social class in Africa 87
Identifiable social groups within African society 88
The value of class analysis in explaining African politics 96
State and civil society 99
Case study: social class in Botswana 100

6 Legitimacy: neo-patrimonialism, personal rule and the centralisation of the African state 107
Centralisation of the African state 108
Personal rule 115
The search for legitimacy 118
Clientelism 119
State and civil society 120
Case study: personal rule in Côte d'Ivoire 122

7 Coercion: military intervention in African politics 129
African military coups d'état 130
Why has Africa experienced so many military coups? 134
Problems facing military rulers 137
The outcomes of military rule in Africa 139
State and civil society 141
Case study: Uganda's 1971 military coup 142

8 Sovereignty I: external influences on African politics 149
Inter-African international relations 151
Superpowers, the Cold War and Africa 152
The impact of the Cold War on African politics 158
Africa and the New World Order 159
State, civil society and external interests 164
Case study: Somalia's international relations 166

9 Sovereignty II: neo-colonialism, structural adjustment and Africa's political economy 175
Burdens of the international economy 179
The African debt crisis 181

The era of structural adjustment 183
The consequences of structural adjustment 185
State, civil society and external interests 189
Case study: Ghana's structural adjustment 192

10 Authority: the crises of accumulation, governance and state collapse 200
The growing crisis of state legitimacy 201
The loss of state authority 207
The state's own survival strategies 212
State and civil society 215
Case study: Zaire – Mobutu's vampire state 217

11 Democracy: re-legitimising the African state? 228
Democracy 229
Explaining the emergence of multi-party democracy 232
The obstacles to democratic consolidation 236
State and civil society 244
Case study: the search for democracy in Algeria 246

12 Conclusions: state and civil society in post-colonial Africa 255

Appendix: a guide to African politics resources on the internet 260
Notes 263
Index 276