

—CONTENTS—

| | |
|-------------------------------------|------|
| Foreword | ix |
| Acknowledgments | xi |
| Introduction: Battering One Another | xiii |

Part I. Thinking

Understanding the Climate Paradox

| | |
|---|----|
| 1. The Psychological Climate Paradox | 3 |
| 2. “Climate Is the New Marx”: The Many Faces of Skepticism and Denial | 9 |
| 3. The Human Animal, as Seen by Evolutionary Psychology | 27 |
| 4. How Climate Facts and Risks Are Perceived: Cognitive Psychology | 35 |
| 5. What Others Are Saying: Social Psychology | 54 |
| 6. The Roots of Denial: The Psychology of Identity | 70 |
| 7. The Five Psychological Barriers to Climate Action | 81 |

Part II. Doing

If It Doesn’t Work, Do Something Else

| | |
|--|-----|
| 8. From Barriers to Solutions | 87 |
| 9. The Power of Social Networks | 95 |
| 10. Reframing the Climate Messages | 110 |
| 11. Make It Simple to Choose Right | 124 |
| 12. Use the Power of Stories to Re-Story Climate | 132 |
| 13. New Signals of Progress | 151 |

Part III. Being

Inside the Living Air

| | |
|--|-----|
| 14. The Air’s Way of Being | 165 |
| 15. Stand Up for Your Depression! | 171 |
| 16. Climate Disruption as Symptom: What Is It Trying to Tell Us? | 190 |
| 17. Re-Imagining Climate as the Living Air | 202 |
| 18. It’s Hopeless and I’ll Give It My All | 217 |
| Notes | 229 |
| Bibliography | 251 |
| Index | 277 |