

Contents

ix Preface

xv Abbreviations

1 1. Introduction

11 2. The Nature of the Problem

12 2.1. The Development of Climate Science

18 2.2. Climate Change as a Public Issue

34 2.3. The Age of Climate Diplomacy

59 2.4. Concluding Remarks

61 3. Obstacles to Action

61 3.1. Scientific Ignorance

67 3.2. Politicizing Science

72 3.3. Facts and Values

78 3.4. The Science/Policy Interface

81 3.5. Organized Denial

93 3.6. Partisanship

96 3.7. Political Institutions

102 3.8. The Hardest Problem

103 3.9. Concluding Remarks

105 4. The Limits of Economics

105 4.1. Economics and Climate Change

110 4.2. The Stern Review and Its Critics

115 4.3. Discounting

130 4.4. Further Problems

138 4.5. State of the Discussion

141 4.6. Concluding Remarks

144 5. The Frontiers of Ethics

144 5.1. The Domain of Concern

148 5.2. Responsibility and Harm

151 5.3. Fault Liability

152	5.4. Human Rights and Domination
160	5.5. Differences That Matter
169	5.6. Revising Morality
177	5.7. Concluding Remarks

178 6. Living with Climate Change

178	6.1. Life in the Anthropocene
179	6.2. It Doesn't Matter What I Do
182	6.3. It's Not the Meat, It's the Motion
185	6.4. Ethics for the Anthropocene
188	6.5. Respect for Nature
193	6.6. Global Justice
200	6.7. Concluding Remarks

201 7. Politics, Policy, and the Road Ahead

201	7.1. The Rectification of Names
208	7.2. Adaptation: The Neglected Option?
210	7.3. Why We Need More Than Adaptation
219	7.4. The Category Formerly Known as Geoengineering
227	7.5. The Way Forward
237	7.6. Concluding Remarks

239	References
-----	------------

261	Index
-----	-------