Contents

Preface xv

Acknowledgments xxix

1 Initial Overview Sources: Specialized Encyclopedias 1

Starting Points beyond Wikipedia 2

Advantages of Specialized Encyclopedias 2

Sample Lists of Encyclopedias 4

Identifying Standard Works, Providing Primary Sources, and Providing Overview Lists of Articles 8

How to Find Articles in Specialized Encyclopedias 10

Examples of Searches 13

Peculiar Strengths of General Sets 14

2 Subject Headings and the Library Catalog 17

What Online Public Access Catalogs (OPACs) Contain 17

Problems in Determining the Right Subject Headings 18

Library of Congress Subject Headings 19

Uniform Heading: Standardization of Search Terms 20

Displaying Unanticipated Aspects and Relationships: Browse Menus 23

Differences from Tags 25

Linkages to Classification Numbers 25

Subject Headings in the OPAC as Index to the Classification Scheme 26

Recognition Access (Provided by Conceptual Categorization Rather Than Relevance Ranking) 27

Scope-Match Specificity and Its Modifications 28

Solving the Problem of Excessive Granularity 30

Problems with Copy Cataloging 31

Specific Entry 33

Preventing Overload in Coverage 35

Predictability in Selection of Terms 36

Loss of Relationship Networks in Faceted Catalogs 37

Five Ways to Find the Right Subject Headings 37

Digresssion: Precoordination and Postcoordination 52

Miscellaneous Tips on Subject Headings 60

3 General Browsing, Focused Browsing, and Use of Classified Bookstacks 63

Alternative Methods of Shelving Book Collections 64

Problems with Shelving Books by Accession Number or Height 65

Enhanced Recognition Capability and Full-Text Depth of Access 66

Focused Browsing Access vs. OPAC Access: Depth vs. Range 67

Focused Browsing Access vs. Keyword Access in Full-Text Websites and Databases: Recognition vs. Prior Specification 68

Sending Books Offsite "Because They Are in Google Books" 72

Browsing in Other Contexts 73

4 Subject Headings and Descriptors in Databases for Journal Articles 75

Descriptors and Thesauri 76

The Importance of "Full" Displays 77

LCSH vs. Descriptors 79

Major Subscription Databases That Use Descriptors 80

EBSCOhost Databases 81

ProQuest Databases 92

Gale Cengage Databases 97

FirstSearch Databases 98

Miscellaneous Databases with Controlled Descriptors 99

How to Identify Databases in All Subject Areas 101

Cross-Disciplinary Searching and Federated Searching 102

Problems with Variant Search Terms 103

Finding Which Journals Exist, Which Are Electronically Available, and Where They Are Indexed 106

7 Related Record Searches 156
Finding Articles with Shared Footnote References 156
Circumventing Vocabulary Problems 157
Different Ways to Progress from an Initial Starting-Point Article 159

8 Higher-Level Overview Sources: Literature Review Articles 161
The Nature of Review Articles 161
Specific Databases and Other Sources for Finding Review Articles 162

9 Published Subject Bibliographies 169
Advantages of Subject Bibliographies 169
Boolean Combinations 171
Solving Vocabulary Problems 172
Structured Arrangements of the Literature on a Topic 173
The Importance of Indexes within Bibliographies 174
Trade-Offs 174
Problems Causing Bibliographies to Be Overlooked 175
Finding Bibliographies 177
Readers' Advisory Sources 184

10 Truncations, Combinations, and Limitations 187
Word Truncation and Wildcard Symbols 188
Boolean Combinations 189
Combinations Using Component Words within Controlled Subject Strings 192
Proximity Searches 196
Limitations of Sets 197

Limiting by Time Periods 197
Limiting by Geographic Area Codes 198
Limiting by Document Types 204
Combining Keywords with Citation or Related Record Searches 205
Refresher: Combinations without Computers 208

11 LOCATING MATERIAL IN OTHER LIBRARIES 211
Worldcat and the Pre-1956 National Union Catalog 211
European Multi-Catalog Sites 214
Full-Text Websites Created from Multiple Library Holdings 214
Other Databases and Union Lists 214
Searching Variant Spellings 215
Finding Copies of Books for Sale 216
Determining Which Libraries Have Special Collections on Your Subject 217
Interlibrary Loan and Document Delivery 219

12 PEOPLE SOURCES 221
Inhibiting Assumptions 221
The Value of Contacting People Directly 223
Tips on Using People Sources 227
Sources outside the Open Internet for Identifying Knowledgeable People 232
Talking to Reference Librarians 238

13 HIDDEN TREASURES 243
Resources Not Covered by Conventional Databases or Catalogs and Not Shelved with Regular Books 243
Special Collections Online: Subscription Databases 244

Special Collections Online: Free Websites 251
Microform Special Collections 252
Government Documents 259
Archives, Manuscripts, and Public Records 277

14 Special Subjects and Formats 285
Biography 285
Book Reviews 289
Business Sources 290
Copyright Status Information 296
Country Studies 297
Genealogy and Local History 298
Illustrations, Pictures, and Photographs 299
Literary Criticism 301
Maps 305
Newspapers 306
Primary Sources 307
Quotations 309
Standards and Specifications 310
Statistics 311
Tabular Data 313
Tests (Psychological and Educational) 313
Translations 314

15 Reference Sources: Types of Literature 315
Recap of Ways to Approach Research Questions 315
Problems Experienced by Most Researchers 316
Type-of-Literature Searching 318
Variant Conceptual Models 318
Specific Types of Literature 319

Structuring Questions by Predictable Formal Properties of Retrieval Systems 324

The Study of Information 327

Specific Sources for Identifying Types of Literature in Any Subject Area 328

Appendix A: Wisdom and Information Science 333

Appendix B: Scholarship vs. Quick Information Seeking 339

Notes 341

Index 347