

Contents

Preface 7

1. The struggle of materialism and idealism in contemporary science, especially in cybernetics 11

2. Reflection 26

2.1 Development of the theory of reflection 27

2.2 The reflection concept in contemporary Marxist literature 35

2.2.1 Types of reflection 39

2.2.2 Reflection in inorganic and organic nature 40

2.2.3 The problem of elementary reflection 41

2.2.4 The immediate and the mediated. 42

2.2.5 The potential and the actual. 43

2.2.6 The subject-object relation, the active-passive relation. 44

2.3 Reflection as a problem 46

3. Entropy and information 54

3.1 Development of the concepts of entropy and information 54

3.2 The information concept in contemporary cybernetic and philosophical literature. 61

3.2.1 Aspects and types of information 64

3.2.2 Information and variety 69

3.2.3 Structure, order and their objective character 72

3.3 Information as a problem 77

4. Development. 90

4.1. Modern idealist theories of development. 91

4.1.1 Bergsonism and neovitalism 91

4.1.2 Holism and organicism 92

4.1.3 Emergentism and creationism 95

4.1.4 Teilhardism 98

4.2 Development in the light of reflection theory and cybernetics 101

4.2.1 Development and reflection 104

4.2.2 Development and cybernetics 106

4.3. Development and time as a problem 112

5. Consciousness 132

5.1 General problems 132

5.1.1 Consciousness in brief outline 138

5.2 Consciousness and reflection	141
5.2.1 The historical character of mind	142
5.2.2 Consciousness and memory	143
5.2.3 The internal aspects of consciousness	149
5.2.4 Activity and creativity of consciousness	151
5.3 Consciousness and information	153
5.3.1 The problem of formalizability of thought	157
6. Cognition	169
6.1 The information sphere	169
6.2 Epistemological transformation	175
6.2.1 Mode of representation	182
6.2.2 Models of epistemological systems	186
6.3 Potential and actual ideas	193
6.4 Scientific information as a form of social information	203
7. Characteristic features of the universe and the problem of orderliness	217
8. Materialist monism and organization of matter	235
Bibliography	247
Index of authors	253