Contents

1 Subject Lines 1
1.1 What's the buzz? 2
1.2 Write the subject line imagining that you are the recipient 3
1.3 Combine your subject line with the preview pane 3
1.4 Use the subject line to give your complete message 4
1.5 Consider using a two-part subject line 4
1.6 Be specific, never vague 4
1.7 Include pertinent details for the recipient 5
1.8 Examples of subject lines 5

2 Salutations 7
2.1 What's the buzz? 8
2.2 Spell the recipient's name correctly 9
2.3 Use an appropriate initial salutation and be careful with titles 9
2.4 Avoid problems when it is not clear if the recipient is male or female, or which is their surname 10
2.5 Be as specific as possible when addressing an email to someone whose name you do not know 12
2.6 If in doubt how to end your email, use Best regards 12
2.7 Don't use a sequence of standard phrases in your final salutation 13
2.8 Ensure your signature contains everything that your recipient may need to know 14
2.9 Avoid PSs and anything under your signature 14

3 Structuring the Content of an Email 15
3.1 What's the buzz? 16
3.2 Plan your email and be sensitive to the recipient's point of view 17
3.3 Begin with a greeting + recipient's name 18

3.4 Assume that no one will read more than the first sentence / paragraph 18
3.5 Remind the recipient who you are when previous contact has only been brief 18
3.6 If there has been no previous contact, give reason for your email immediately 19
3.7 Make it clear who should read your email and what it is you are requesting 20
3.8 Indicate to multiple recipients who actually needs to read the mail. 21
3.9 Organize the information in the most logical order and only include what is necessary 21
3.10 Avoid templates for beginnings and endings 22
3.11 Bear in mind that long emails will be scrolled 23
3.12 When you have something negative to say use the 'sandwich' technique' 24
3.13 Use link words in long emails to show connections and to draw attention to important points 24
3.14 Ensure that recipients in different time zones will interpret dates and times correctly 25
3.15 Be aware of the importance of an email—not just for you or your recipient, but also for a third party 26
3.16 The last words 27
3.17 Don't cc people unless strictly necessary 27
3.18 Be explicit in your the main text of your email that you have attached a document 28

4 Building a Relationship and Deciding the Level of Formality 29
4.1 What's the buzz? 30
4.2 How to judge the level of formality 32
4.3 Use appropriate language and don't mix levels of formality 36
4.4 Note any differences in style and level of formality between English and your language 37
4.5 Be careful of your tone when asking people to do something for you 39
4.6 Show your recipient respect and motivate them to reply 41
4.7 Use common interests to establish and cement a relationship 42
4.8 Maintain a friendly relationship. 43
4.9 Adopt a non-aggressive approach 44
4.10 Add a friendly phrase at the end of an email 45
4.11 An example of how a simple and friendly request can lead to a possible collaboration. 46

5 Language, Translating and Spelling 49
- 5.1 What's the buzz? 50
- 5.2 Minimize mistakes in your English by writing short and simple emails 51
- 5.3 Don't experiment with your English, instead copy / adapt the English of the sender 52
- 5.4 Be concise and precise 53
- 5.5 Use short sentences and choose the best grammatical subject 54
- 5.6 Use the correct word / phrase order 55
- 5.7 Avoid ambiguity 57
- 5.8 When using pronouns ensure that it is 100% clear to the recipient what noun the pronoun refers to 58
- 5.9 Use standard phrases rather than translations from your own language 59
- 5.10 Don't exaggerate or sound insincere 60
- 5.11 Beware of the potential dangers of Google Translate 60
- 5.12 Be careful how you use pronouns 62
- 5.13 Check your spelling and grammar 63
- 5.14 Don't rely 100% on your spell checker 64
- 5.15 If the mail is very important, have it checked by an expert 65

6 Requests and Replies 67
- 6.1 What's the buzz? 68
- 6.2 Lay out your request clearly 70
- 6.3 Don't assume that the reader will understand the importance of or reason for your request 72
- 6.4 Motivate the recipient to reply by empathizing with their situation or by paying them a compliment 73
- 6.5 Give the recipient all the information they need 73
- 6.6 Consider not sending an attachment to someone with whom you have had no previous contact 75
- 6.7 Include all the relevant information that the recipient needs to assess your request 76
- 6.8 When asking someone to review your work, give explicit instructions 76
- 6.9 Avoid blocks of text and don't force your reader to make sense of everything 78
- 6.10 Decide whether it might be better just to make one request rather than several 79
- 6.11 For multiple requests, include a mini summary at the end of the email 79
- 6.12 When making multiple requests, ensure that each individual request is clear 81

6.13 Give deadlines 82
6.14 When you receive a reply, be prepared to ask for clarifications 83
6.15 In replies to requests consider inserting your answers within the body of the sender's email 84
6.16 Insert friendly comments within the body of the sender's text 86

7 Cover Letters for Summer Schools, Internships, Placements, Erasmus, PhD / MA / Postdoc Programs 87
7.1 What's the buzz? 88
7.2 Begin your letter with a heading to indicate what job you are applying for 91
7.3 Initial salutation 92
7.4 First paragraph (introduction) 93
7.5 Second / third paragraphs 93
7.6 Closing paragraph 94
7.7 Final salutation 94
7.8 Recognize the importance of such letters and triple check everything 95
7.9 Erasmus programme 96
7.10 Workshop 98
7.11 Summer school 100
7.12 PhD application 101
7.13 Placement 103
7.14 Research position / Internship 104

8 Reference Letters 109
8.1 What's the buzz? 110
8.2 What is a reference? 110
8.3 Asking for a reference letter 111
8.4 Typical questions that a reference letter addresses 112
8.5 Writing your own reference letter 113
8.6 Structure and template reference letter 114

9 Brief Notes on Writing Research Proposals and Research Statements 115
9.1 What's the buzz? 116
9.2 Writing a research proposal for external funding 117
9.3 Writing a research proposal for PhD or Postdoc position 119
9.4 Differences between a research proposal for a PhD program or Postdoc position 120
9.5 Writing a Statement of Purpose or Research Interest 120

10 How to Criticize Constructively 123
- 10.1 What's the buzz? 124
- 10.2 Decide whether email is the best format to make a criticism 124
- 10.3 Think about the context that your reader will be in when reading your email 125
- 10.4 Structure your email so that the focus is not only on the criticism 125
- 10.5 Use the first words set a positive tone 127
- 10.6 Be constructive in your criticism 128
- 10.7 Be diplomatic and make detailed comments rather than unspecific observations 131
- 10.8 Avoid being too direct when asking for clarification and making suggestions 132
- 10.9 When you have some good to say use shorter sentences; use longer sentences for 'bad' news 133
- 10.10 Use positive wording 133
- 10.11 Conclude your report by saying something positive 134
- 10.12 Re-read everything before you hit the "send" button 134
- 10.13 Be diplomatic when sending reminders 134
- 10.14 Be appreciative when thanking someone for doing an informal review of your work 136

11 Writing a Peer Review 137
- 11.1 What's the buzz? 138
- 11.2 Be clear about your role as a reviewer 139
- 11.3 Read your journal's review guidelines 139
- 11.4 How to structure a referee's report: (1) acceptance subject to revisions 141
- 11.5 How to structure a referee's report: (2) complete rejection 142
- 11.6 How to structure a referee's report: (3) acceptance as is 142
- 11.7 Bear in mind the authors' expectations of you as a reviewer 142
- 11.8 Before you begin your report, put yourself in the author's shoes 143
- 11.9 Use the sandwich approach: begin and end on a positive note 144
- 11.10 Use a soft approach when criticizing 145
- 11.11 Avoid the temptation to insult the author 147
- 11.12 Don't just use should to make recommendations 148

11.13 Use separate paragraphs to outline your comments 14
11.14 Make sure your comments are explicit and explain how they could be implemented 14
11.15 Use you to address the authors, and I (i.e., the first person) to make reference to yourself 15
11.16 Don't make indiscriminate comments about the level of English 15
11.17 Be careful of your own level of English and spelling 15
11.18 My plea to referees with regard to author's level of English 154

12 Writing a Reply to the Reviewers' Reports 157
12.1 What's the buzz? 158
12.2 Remember that yours is not the first paper to have been rejected 159
12.3 Structure your reply to the referees in a way that will keep referees and editors happy 159
12.4 Present your answers to the reviewers using the clearest possible layout 160
12.5 Be brief 162
12.6 Call yourselves we not the authors 162
12.7 Don't be embarrassed to say you don't understand the referee's comments 163
12.8 Use the present and present perfect to outline the changes you have made 163
12.9 Justify why and where you have not made changes 164
12.10 If you disagree with the reviewers, always be diplomatic 164
12.11 If a reviewer finds a limitation in your work, deal with the criticism constructively 166
12.12 Don't find things to criticize in the referee's work or in the workings of the journal 167
12.13 Be aware of what might happen if you ignore the referee's advice 169

13 Communicating with the Editor 171
13.1 What's the buzz? 172
13.2 Focus only on what you need to achieve 173
13.3 Ensure your cover email / letter is clear and accurate 174
13.4 If you've only made a few changes, describe them in the letter to the editor 175
13.5 Mention whether the manuscript has already been revised by a native speaker 176
13.6 Be diplomatic in any emails to check the progress of your manuscript 177

14 Useful Phrases . . . 181
- 14.1 What's the buzz? . . . 181
- 14.2 Initial salutation . . . 183
- 14.3 Final salutation . . . 184
- 14.4 Phrase before final salutation . . . 184
- 14.5 Giving main reason for message . . . 185
- 14.6 Organizing content . . . 186
- 14.7 Asking favors / giving help . . . 187
- 14.8 Invitations . . . 188
- 14.9 Making inquiries . . . 189
- 14.10 Replying to inquiries . . . 190
- 14.11 Talking about the next step . . . 191
- 14.12 Giving and responding to deadlines . . . 191
- 14.13 Chasing . . . 192
- 14.14 Making arrangements for meetings and teleconferences . . . 193
- 14.15 Sending documents for informal revision . . . 195
- 14.16 Receiving and commenting on documents for informal revision . . . 196
- 14.17 Referees reports . . . 198
- 14.18 Author's reply to referees and editors . . . 199
- 14.19 Generic problems . . . 200
- 14.20 Asking for and giving clarification . . . 202
- 14.21 Thanking . . . 203
- 14.22 Apologizing . . . 204
- 14.23 Sending attachments . . . 205
- 14.24 Technical problems with email . . . 206
- 14.25 Out of office message . . . 206

15 Tense Usage . . . 207
- 15.1 What's the buzz? . . . 207
- 15.2 Use of the present simple . . . 208
- 15.3 Non-use of the present simple . . . 210
- 15.4 Use of the present continuous . . . 210
- 15.5 Non-use of continuous forms . . . 211
- 15.6 Future simple [will] . . . 212
- 15.7 Future continuous . . . 214
- 15.8 be going to . . . 215
- 15.9 Past simple . . . 216
- 15.10 Present perfect simple . . . 216
- 15.11 Present perfect continuous . . . 218
- 15.12 Non-use of present perfect continuous . . . 218
- 15.13 The imperative form . . . 219
- 15.14 Zero and first conditional forms . . . 220
- 15.15 Second conditional . . . 220
- 15.16 Third conditional . . . 221

15.17 Modal verbs expressing ability and possibility: can, could, may, might 222
15.18 Modal verbs expressing advice and obligation: have to, must, need, should 223
15.19 Modal verbs for offers, requests, invitations, and suggestions: can, may, could, would, shall, will 225
15.20 Word order 226
15.21 Link words 229

Acknowledgements 231

Sources of the Factoids 233

Index 237