

Contents

Introduction	9
I. Topic/ Comment Articulation (TCA) in Czechoslovak Linguistics	15
1. Results Achieved	15
1.1 Historical Background	15
1.2 Main Points of Agreement	17
1.21 Autonomy of TCA	17
1.22 Communicative Dynamism	18
1.23 Three Layers of TCA	19
1.24 TCA and Quantification	22
1.25 Concluding remarks	22
2. Open Questions	24
2.1 How to Define the Basic Notions?	24
2.2 Articulation of What?	27
2.21 Sentence and Utterance	27
2.22 Sentence and its Parts	28
2.3 How to Keep Apart Types of Constructions?	29
2.4 Second Instance	32
2.5 A Basis for the Explanation of TCA	39
2.6 TCA and the Levels of Language System	42
II. Empirical Aspects	45
3. Contextual Boundness and the Question Test	45
3.1 Communicative Dynamism and Communicative Importance	45

3.2	Question Test and Boundness Juncture	49
3.3	Focus as a Linguistic Unit	57
3.4	Communicative Dynamism inside the Bound Segment	59
3.5	Communicative Dynamism inside the Focus	64
3.6	Systemic Ordering of Participants	67
3.7	The Status of Boundness Juncture	68
3.8	Stock of Shared Knowledge	70
4.	Topic/ Comment Articulation and Semantics	74
4.1	Meaning and Negation	75
4.11	Negation in Transformational Grammar	76
4.12	Some Prerequisites	79
4.13	Status and Position of Negation in SR	81
4.14	Scope of Negation	84
4.15	Semantic Representation of Negation	91
4.16	Linguistic Negation and Negation in Logic	92
4.17	Negation of Contextually Non- Bound Sentences	96
4.18	Examples Relevant for Generative Description	98
4.2	Presupposition and Allegation	103
4.21	A Short Survey of Views on Pre-suppositions	104
4.22	Three Types of Presuppositions	105
4.23	Chomsky's Notion of Presupposition	106
4.24	Allegation	108

	4.25 Presuppositions and the Structure of the Sentence	110
S. Kajić	4.3 Conditions of the Use of Sentences	111
	4.31 Some Comments on Keenan's Approach	111
	4.32 Use of Sentences	114
	4.33 Use of Sentences and TCA	118
S. Kajić	4.4 Truth Conditions and Linguistic Meaning	122
	4.41 Sentences with Quantification	125
	4.42 Exhaustive Listing	129
	4.43 Sentences without Overt Quantification	131
	4.44 CD and Distributivity	132
	4.45 Semantic Autonomy of TCA	137
	4.46 CD and Linguistic Meaning	133
	4.47 Some Conclusions	142
S. Kajić	5. Place of Topic/ Comment Articulation in the Description of Language	146
	5.1 TCA and the Levels	147
	5.2 TCA and the Units	150
	5.3 TCA and the Size of Units	151
	5.31 Units Smaller than the Sentence	151
	5.32 Units Larger than the Sentence	156
	III. Generative Description	161
	6. Topic/ Comment Articulation in Transformational Generative Grammar	161
S. Kajić	6.1 Presupposition and Focus in Extended Standard Theory	161
S. Kajić	6.2 TCA and Global Constraints	165

6.3	TCA and Fillmore's Mysteries	167
6.4	European and Japanese Theories of TCA in a Transformational Framework	171
6.41	Dahl's Approach	171
6.42	Kuno's Approach	172
6.43	Some Other Proposals	176
7.	Functional Generative Description, Background and Motivations	177
7.1	Two Types of Generative Descriptions	177
7.11	Chomsky's Conditions on a Generative Description	177
7.12	Remarks on Interpretive Semantics	177
7.13	Stratificational Systems	179
7.2	Predicate Logic and Semantic Structure of the Sentence	181
7.21	The Order of Elements	181
7.22	Phrase Structure and Dependency Syntax	183
7.23	Obligatory and Optional Participants	185
7.3	Contextual Boundness	190
7.4	Some Examples of SR's of Sentences	192
7.5	Performative Hypersentence	193
7.6	An Interpretation of the SR's	199
8.	Topic/ Comment Articulation in the Frame- work of Functional Generative Description	204
8.1	Generative Component	204
8.11	Preliminaries	204
8.12	Definitions	206

8.13 Interpretation	208
8.14 Theorems	209
8.15 TCA in the Generative Component	212
8.16 An Example	214
8.17 The Meta-Rules	217
8.18 Negation in the Generative Component	221
8.19 A New Version of the Generative Component	223
8.2 Transductive Components	225
8.21 Informal Account	225
8.22 Some Formal Properties	227
8.23 Some Rules for TCA	229
8.24 Examples	232
8.25 Notes to Transductive Components for English	234
8.26 Some Conclusions	236
IV. Conclusions	239
9. A Generative Semantics Without Global Constraints	239
9.1 A Coherent Form of Linguistic Description	239
9.11 The Shape of the Description	239
9.12 Semantics and Communication	243
9.2 The Meaning of a Sentence	245
9.3 A Remark on the Coherence of a Text	251
9.4 Main Results	252

Table 1	256
References	259
Notes	283