

Contents

|  |           |
|--|-----------|
| List of Figures . . . . .  | vi        |
| Foreword . . . . .   | vii       |
| Acknowledgments . . . . .  | ix        |
| Introduction . . . . .  | 1  |
| 0.1 Situation as It Affects Communication . . . . .                        | 1         |
| 0.2 On the Nature of Assumptions in Communication . . . . .                | 1         |
| 0.3 Scope of the Study . . . . .   | 3         |
| 0.4 Underlying Assumptions of the Study . . . . .                          | 5         |
| 0.5 Synopsis of the Study . . . . .  | 6         |
| 1 A Taxonomy of Communication Situations . . . . .                  | 9  |
| 1.1 The Need for a Taxonomy of Communication Situations . . . . .          | 9         |
| 1.2 Distinctive Features of the Communication Situation Taxonomy . . . . . | 12        |
| 1.3 Discussion of the Communication Situation Taxonomy . . . . .           | 16        |
| 1.4 Related Areas of Research . . . . .                                    | 19        |
| 1.5 Concluding Remarks . . . . .   | 20        |
| 2 Toward a Linguistic Model of Human Knowledge Structure . . . . .  | 24 |
| 2.1 Frame: an Organizing Principle of Knowledge . . . . .                  | 25        |
| 2.2 Pragmatic Knowledge . . . . .  | 36        |
| 2.3 Linguistic Models for Knowledge Structures . . . . .                   | 41        |
| 3 Functions of First Mention References in Discourse . . . . .      | 49 |
| 3.1 On First Mention References in General . . . . .                       | 49        |
| 3.2 Grammatical Features of First Mention References . . . . .             | 50        |
| 3.3 First Mention References and Cues . . . . .                            | 67        |
| 3.4 Conclusions . . . . .  | 72        |
| 4 The Pragmatics of Author Comments . . . . .                       | 76 |
| 4.1 On Comments in General . . . . .                                       | 76        |
| 4.2 Types of Author Comments . . . . .                                     | 80        |
| 4.3 Marking of Author Comments . . . . .                                   | 87        |
| 4.4 The Interpretation of Author Comments . . . . .                        | 109       |
| 4.5 Conclusions . . . . .  | 116       |

|   |            |
|---|------------|
| 5 Conclusions and Applications . . . . .               | 121 |
| 5.1 Conclusions of the Study . . . . .                        | 121        |
| 5.2 Applications of This Study to Other Disciplines . . . . . | 124        |
| 5.3 The Analysis of an English Text . . . . .                 | 126        |
| 5.4 Toward an Interdisciplinary Approach . . . . .            | 137        |
| References . . . . .                                   | 140 |
| Texts References . . . . .                             | 148 |

List of Figures

|   |    |
|---|----|
| 1.1 Four types of media in language communication,characterized by their distinctive features . . . . .   | 14 |
| 1.2 Four types of interaction in language communication,characterized by their distinctive features . . . . .   | 14 |
| 1.3 A distinctive-feature matrix of the communicationsituation taxonomy, with the types of utteranceswhich occur in them . . . . .                                  | 15 |
| 2.1 Schematic representation of many scenes associatedwith the same frame . . . . .   | 30 |
| 2.2 Schematic representation of one scene associatedwith two different frames . . . . .   | 31 |
| 3.1 The discourse functions of various grammaticaland lexical devices in first mention references . . . . .   | 69 |
| 4.1 The Longacre scheme of discourse types based on theintersection of two parameters, agent orientation (a.o.),and contingent temporal succession (c.s.) . . . . . | 79 |