I am also very thankful to Russia Direct and its many editors (especially Ekaterina Zaborovskaya and Pavel Koshkin). Their interviews were always thought provoking, and Russia Direct provided a very important service of providing analysis of Russian-American relations during the ongoing crisis without any bias. My first exposure to Russia Direct was when I wrote an analytical article about Russia's Morsko Doctrine and Ukraine. From that time forward, we developed a very good working relationship. I hope that when I next travel to Moscow to research my next book, that we'll be able to collaborate even more closely.
