

CONTENTS

1. Thought Experiments	1
1. Introduction	1
2. What thought experiments are	1
3. First difficulty: the background	6
4. Parenthesis: relevance and natural kinds	12
5. Second difficulty: imagination and 'possibility'	15
6. Conditions of personhood	21
7. The identification issue: laws and theoretical impossibilities	27
8. The reidentification issue: more science fantasies	36
9. Losing touch with reality	43
10. A promissory note	48
2. Infants and Foetuses	49
1. Introduction	49
2. Potentialities and interests	49
3. Infants as fuzzy persons	56
4. Failed potentials: the 'Aristotelian principle'	57
5. IVF embryos	69
6. Summary	72
3. Mental Deficiency, Breakdown, and Insanity	75
1. Introduction	75
2. The sanity of irrationality	75
3. What is mental illness?	84
4. Contrasts with the psychopath	89
5. The subnormal and the senile	93
6. Speciesism	97
4. Fugues, Hypnosis, and Multiple Personality	100
1. The unity and continuity of consciousness	100
2. Fugues and epileptic automatism	103
3. Hypnosis	106
4. Multiple personality: Christine Beauchamp	109
5. How many Miss Beauchamps?	118
6. Unity; and the Greeks	128
5. Being in Two Minds	132
1. The problem introduced	132
2. Our two brains	133

3. Commissurotomy	136
4. Philosophical perplexities	140
5. The language of brains	143
6. Some semi-parallels	145
7. P.S.: an apparent exception	152
8. Confabulation and the drive to minimize disunity	154
9. How should we explain conflicts?	157
10. Counting minds	161
11. A final word on the brain	166
6. The Coherence of Consciousness	168
1. Introduction: consciousness head-on	168
2. Other times, other places	169
3. The heterogeneity of consciousness	173
4. Parenthesis: two paths to avoid	181
5. Consciousness and the sciences	183
6. 'Consciousness' in the vernacular	192
7. Self-consciousness	197
7. Models of Mind	198
1. Introduction: 'models'	198
2. Man in the Iliad	200
3. Aristotle's man	209
4. From psuche to mind	214
5. The domination of the mind	217
6. The person as a computer	221
7. Conclusion	228
Epilogue	230
Bibliography	235
Index	243