

Contents

List of Tables and Figures	ix
Preface and Acknowledgments	x
Introduction	1
1 A Homesick World?	7
Introduction	7
The universalists: places without particular meaning	8
The particularists: places without universal meaning	10
Place attachments in a globalizing world	11
Sociological attachments	16
The United States: restless and rootless?	18
Western Europe: nostalgia for national homogeneity	22
2 Why Feeling at Home Matters	26
Introduction	26
Feeling at home in particular places	30
Feeling at home in generic places	33
Beyond the particular and the generic: the symbolic	36
Meanings of home	38
The emotion of feeling at home	39
3 Losing Home at Home: When Men and Women Feel More at Home at Work	43
Introduction	43
Home as hell; home as haven/heaven?	44
The marginalization of home in the US	45
The Netherlands: the part-time society	48
Scandinavian welfare states	53
Home, what home?	56

4	New Ways of Home-making: Feeling at Home in the Community?	62
	Introduction	62
	From hell to haven: home-making by people with psychiatric and intellectual disabilities	63
	From hell to heaven: moving to the Castro, a gay neighborhood in the making	74
	Conclusion: the promises and pitfalls of communities	82
5	Feeling at Home in the Nation? Understanding Dutch Nostalgia	84
	Introduction	84
	A multicultural paradise?	85
	The Dutch cultural consensus (and some dissensus)	87
	The culturalization of citizenship	92
	(Not) feeling at home in the Netherlands	94
	America, the homeland?	104
6	Conclusion: Inclusive Ways of Feeling at Home?	106
	Introduction	106
	Two types of nostalgia: reflective and restorative	107
	Four spheres of belonging	110
	Feeling at home 'light'	122
	Notes	125
	Bibliography	129
	Index	145