

Contents

|                                                               |        |
|---------------------------------------------------------------|--------|
| Preface                                                       | 9      |
| Acknowledgments                                               | 11     |
| Introduction                                                  | 13     |
| A. Stages in Schelling's Philosophical Career                 | 15     |
| B. Boehme and Schelling : An Initial Profile of theSystem | 18     |
| C. Method                                                     | 23     |
| PART ONE : Jacob Boehme                                   | 29 |
| 1 Introduction : The Early Works                              | 31     |
| A. Critical Problems in Studying Boehme                       | 32     |
| B. The Early Works                                            | 36     |
| 2 The Mature System                                           | 52     |
| A. God                                                        | 53     |
| B. Creation                                                   | 64     |
| C. Evil                                                       | 67     |

|   |                                                                                                           |     |
|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 8 | THE LATER PHILOSOPHY OF SCHELLING                                                                         |     |
|   | D. Human Nature                                                                                           | 71  |
|   | Epilogue                                                                                                  | 81  |
|   | PART TWO: Schelling's Thought (1809–1815)                                                                 | 83  |
| 3 | Background in Schelling's Early Philosophy (1792–1808)                                                    | 85  |
|   | A. The Finite Self                                                                                        | 87  |
|   | B. Nature                                                                                                 | 91  |
|   | C. Transcendental Idealism                                                                                | 98  |
|   | D. From Identity to Religion                                                                              | 102 |
| 4 | Outline of the New Program:                                                                               |     |
|   | Of Human Freedom (1809)                                                                            | 114 |
|   | A. The Problem of Pantheism                                                                               | 119 |
|   | B. The Ontological Basis of Evil                                                                          | 124 |
|   | C. Actual Evil                                                                                            | 132 |
|   | D. God and Evil                                                                                           | 140 |
|   | E. God's Life and the Creation                                                                            | 144 |
| 5 | Development and Controversy: The Stuttgart Lectures(1810) and Two Polemical Essays (1812–1813) | 151 |
|   | A. God                                                                                                    | 154 |
|   | B. Nature                                                                                                 | 166 |
|   | C. Human Nature                                                                                           | 172 |
|   | D. Reply to Jacobi                                                                                        | 186 |
|   | E. Reply to Eschenmayer                                                                                   | 190 |
| 6 | The Structure of God and the Turn to Positive Philosophy:                                                 |     |
|   | The Ages of the World (1811–1815)                                                                  | 194 |
|   | A. The Basic Polarity in God                                                                              | 201 |
|   | B. Interaction of the Two Poles: God's PretemporalBeing                                               | 212 |
|   | C. The Possible World                                                                                     | 224 |
|   | D. God's Decision to Create the World                                                                     | 234 |
|   | E. Toward the Positive Philosophy                                                                         | 249 |
|   | Conclusion                                                                                                | 262 |
|   | Appendix                                                                                                  | 272 |
|   | Bibliography                                                                                              | 277 |
|   | Index of Proper Names                                                                                     | 287 |
|   | Subject Index                                                                                             | 291 |