

---

Contents

---

Acknowledgements	x
List of illustrations	xi
Method of citation	xii
1 Introductory remarks	1
1.1 On the degree of jurisprudential confusion about Spinoza's intent	1
1.2 What is different about Spinoza's conception of right?	7
1.3 The right-producing machines	13
1.4 The mechanisation of right – the juridification of the world	14
2 The role of the attributes in the generation of right	20
2.1 Introduction	20
2.2 Force and generation	21
2.2.1 The Cartesian problematic	21
2.2.2 The principle of the generatrix	28
2.3 Redefining the attributes	32
2.3.1 A fine distinction	32
2.3.2 A reader of Seneca	38
2.3.3 The appearance of the attribute of Extension (distinction)	43
2.3.4 The appearance of the attribute of Thought (certainty)	48
2.4 Summation of the role of the attributes in constituting order as right	54
2.5 The passage from the incorporeal theory of the attributes to the dynamic theory of mechanics, and its juridical import	58
3 The physics of right	68
3.1 Introduction	68
3.2 Methodological note	69

3.3	Statics – the first order of immutability	70
3.3.1	Nature as machine	70
3.3.2	From kinematics to statics; from statics to kinematics	76
3.3.3	Force, work, power, capacity for work, right	84
3.3.4	Hydrostatics – fluid immutability and the celestial vortices	90
3.4	The second order of immutability – towards a dynamics	95
3.4.1	Motion to rest	96
3.4.2	An increase in finite power: from motion to inclination to motion	104
4	Natural right I: the logic of existential consciousness	115
4.1	Introduction	115
4.2	Consciousness of natural right	115
4.2.1	Preliminary remarks on the synthetic nature of natural right	115
4.2.2	Pre-consciousness – the actual essence of things	120
4.2.3	Existential consciousness	125
4.3	Existential consciousness and the affects	139
4.3.1	Distinguishing between the affects and conative modulations	139
4.3.2	The principles of positive and negative transition	140
4.4	Conclusion	145
5	Natural right II: ethics of essential consciousness	150
5.1	Introduction	150
5.2	Finite essential consciousness	150
5.2.1	The general equilibrium	150
5.2.2	The norms of the enduring present	152
5.3	The infinite machine	154
5.3.1	The transition from finite to infinite mechanism	154
5.3.2	The affects of the infinite machine – a modal ethics	163
5.3.3	Further speculations concerning the infinite machine from the modal perspective	174
5.3.4	Potestas, potentia finita rei, potentia absoluta Dei	175
5.4	Against a Hobbes-inspired interpretation of Spinoza's theory	177
5.5	Conclusion – from the individual to the social	184
6	Juridical physics	189
6.1	Introduction	189
6.2	The construction of the finite imperial mode	189
6.2.1	Complex bodies	189

---

6.2.2	Circulation: the lifeblood of the imperium	191
6.2.3	Augmentation of the power of acting I: homo faber	196
6.2.4	Augmentation of power of acting II: existential feedback	198
6.2.5	Augmentation of the power of acting III: human relations	198
6.3	Right in common – Spinoza’s theory of natural right in the imperium	200
6.3.1	The problematic of common natures	200
6.3.2	The principle of common right	202
6.3.3	From substance to imperium	206
6.3.4	The highest aim of society – ethics and politics	220
7	Conclusion	228
	Appendix 1 Spinoza’s library	234
	Part 1: books officially forming part of Spinoza’s estate at death	234
	Part 2: extract from a letter by Schuller detailing a list of books found among Spinoza’s things	238
	Index	240