

Contents

Notes on Contributors

xi

Introduction

1

Graham Butt

Motivations for writing Geography, Education and the Future 3

The organizational structure of Geography, Education and the Future 5

Conclusions 9

Note 10

References 11

Part 1 CHILDREN, YOUNG PEOPLE AND GEOGRAPHY

Mary Biddulph

1 Children's Geographies in the Primary School

15

Simon Catling

Introduction 15

Younger children's geographies 16

The evolving primary curriculum 19

Children's engagement through the Young Geographers' Project 21

Issues in applying children's geographies in primary education 23

Conclusion 26

References 28

2 Young People's Conceptions of Geography and Education

30

Nick Hopwood

Introduction 30

Taking young people and their views seriously 31

Conceptions and learning	32
Conceptions and the future of geography education	33
What do we know about young people's conceptions of geography?	34
How do young people conceive the relationship between geography education and values?	36
Young people, geography and the[ir] future	37
Acknowledgements	41
References	41
3 Young People's Geographies: Implications for Secondary School Geography	44
Mary Biddulph
Changes in the subject: 'Young People's Geographies'	44
Engagement and the geography curriculum: tokenism or democratic opportunities?	46
Young people's geographies: what are they?	47
Participatory processes: a framework for curriculum conversations	49
Conclusions	55
References	57
Discussion to Part 1	60
Pat Thomson
References	62
Part 2 PLACE, SPACE AND CHANGE
John Morgan
4 Reading and Writing Place: A Role for Geographical Education in the Twenty-First Century?	65
Eleanor Rawling
Introduction	65
Studying place: in academia and in school	66
The tensions of place and landscape study	70
Reading and writing place	73
Reading the River Severn	76
The post-pastoral: a blueprint for geographical education?	80
References	81

5 Place-Based Education versus Geography Education? 84

Alun Morgan

Introduction	84
Geographical versus cross-curricular approaches to place in education	86
The concept of 'place' in mainstream (geography) education – the United States and United Kingdom	88
Recent critical responses	91
The emerging experience of place-based education	93
Geography education and place-based education – incompatible or complementary?	97
Conclusion	99
Notes	101
References	102

6 After the Crisis . . . Place, Space and Identity 109

John Morgan

Introduction	109
Spatial fixes	110
After the crisis . . .	115
Note	119
References	119

Discussion to Part 2 121

Charles Rawding

Note	122
References	122

Part 3 MEDIATING FORMS OF GEOGRAPHICAL KNOWLEDGE

Roger Firth

7 Reframing School Geography: A Capability Approach 127

David Lambert

Introduction	127
Framing the subject in a hostile climate	128
Restating the idea of education	131
Capability and the contribution of geography	132

	To what extent is capability a beguiling concept?	136
	Conclusion	138
	Note	139
	References	139
8	Debates about Knowledge and the Curriculum: Some Implications for Geography Education	141
	Roger Firth
	Introduction	141
	Bringing knowledge back in	143
	From the new sociology of education to social realism	146
	The school curriculum and geography	148
	Discussion	150
	Final thoughts	159
	Notes	160
	References	161
9	Geographical Knowledge and Professional Development	165
	Clare Brooks
	Introduction	165
	Describing teachers' subject knowledge	166
	Academic geography and school geography	169
	The relationship between the discipline and the school subject	170
	Subject expertise and its influence on practice	172
	Psychologizing subject-matter	174
	Final words	177
	Note	178
	References	178
	Discussion to Part 3	181
	Michael Young
Part 4	GLOBAL ETHICS, ENVIRONMENT AND CITIZENSHIP
	Fran Martin
10	Morality and Geography Education	187
	Alun Morgan
	Introduction	187

The pressing need for 'ethical knowledge' among geography educators	189
The shifting moral ground of geography	190
(Education for) Place-based ethics?	192
Varieties of moral geography education	194
Approaches to moral (geography) education	195
Conclusion: setting the moral compass – applied ethics in geography education	198
Notes	200
References	201

11 Global Ethics, Sustainability and Partnership 206

Fran Martin

Post-colonial theory and sustainability	207
Sustainability and equity	210
School partnerships and learning about sustainability	210
UK education policy and the role of NGOs	213
Geography, education and study abroad	215
Implications for geographical education	216
An argument 'for space'	217
Critical global citizenship	218
Knowledge or knowledges?	219
Conclusion	219
Notes	221
References	222

12 Teaching Ethical Citizens? A Geographical Approach 225

Jessica Pykett

The geography of citizenship education	225
The long road to citizenship education	227
Citizenship and geography	231
Teaching fair trade, cultivating ethical citizens	234
Conclusion	237
References	237

Discussion to Part 4 240

Clive Barnett

References	243
------------	-----

Conclusion	244
Margaret Roberts
The challenge of the future	244
The challenge of geography as a subject discipline	246
The challenge of geography's place in the curriculum	248
The challenge of teaching and learning geography in the twenty-first century	250
The challenge for geography education	252
References	252
Index	255
Discussion	151
Final thoughts	159
Notes	161
References	161
Geographical Knowledge and Professional Development	165
Clare Brooks
Introduction	165
Describing teachers' subject knowledge	168
Academic geography and school geography	169
The relationship between the discipline and the school subject	170
Subject expertise and its influence on practice	172
Psychologizing subject matter	174
Final words	177
References	178
Teaching Ethical Citizenship? A Geographical Approach	178
Jessica Pykett
The geography of citizenship education	181
The long road to citizenship education	181
Citizenship and geography	181
Teaching fair trade: cultivating ethical citizens	181
Conclusion	181
References	181
Discussion to Part 3	181
Michael Young
Introduction	181
References	181
Discussion to Part 4	181
Clive Barnett
Introduction	181
References	181