

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction	1
PART I
The parallel polis: Central–East European models of civil society	11
1 ‘The self-limiting revolution’: Polish voices	13
2 ‘The independent life of society’: Czechoslovakian and Hungarian voices	33
PART II
Democracy at the grass roots: Latin American models of civil society	51
3 ‘We need to build civil society because we want freedom’: the Latin American left’s discovery of civil society	53
4 The idea of civil society in the theory-practice of Latin American new social movements	72
PART III
The taming of the idea of civil society since 1989	87
5 Civil society and theories of democratisation in Eastern Europe	89
6 Civil society and theories of democratisation in Latin America	101

PART IV

New alternatives? 113

7 Models of global civil society 115

8 'An echo that turns itself into many voices': Zapatismo
and civil society as revolutionary practice 130

PART V

The democracy of civil society: theory and practice 145

9 Theorising the democracy of civil society 147

Conclusion: the democracy of civil society as practice 168

Notes 172

Bibliography 177

Index 188