

Table of Contents

Preface and Acknowledgements	ix
INTRODUCTION
Constitutional Adjudication Haunted by Indeterminacy	1
CHAPTER ONE
Historical Narratives in Constitutional Reasoning: Intuitions and Myths Revisited	17
1.1. History and tradition as accounts of the past: the need for a better distinction, or time to adopt a (not so) new methodology?	20
1.2. Common-law reasoning, Edmund Burke, and conservative/liberal ideals	34
1.3. Conclusion: towards a better understanding of historical narratives	53
CHAPTER TWO
An Overview of Arguments Used in Constitutional Adjudication	63
2.1. The limits of textualism in constitutional reasoning	65
2.2. Courts reaching beyond the text: means of construction outside the constitutional text	78
2.3. Arguments from context: the trace of the past, history, and traditions in constitutional cases	93
2.4. Conclusion: variety and recurring traits in constitutional argument	102

CHAPTER THREE

The Constitutional Text in the Light of History	109
3.1. Constitutions on their pasts; courts on the past of their constitutions	111
3.2. One Pole: the constitutional text calling for an inquiry into history	116
3.3. The middle of the continuum: a brief overview	137
3.4. The other pole: history as constitutional text in the Québec secession reference	147
3.5. Summary of findings: towards disenchantment	157

CHAPTER FOUR

Behind Historical Narratives: The Promise of Continuity	171
4.1. On the vices and virtues of continuity in constitutional adjudication	173
4.2. Constructing constitutional continuity from the building blocks of preferred pasts	181
4.3. Seeing continuity and making it make a difference: lessons from transitional justice jurisprudence	204
4.4. Conclusion without closure: deceived by continuity in constitutional reasoning	221

CHAPTER FIVE

The Fruits of Reconciliation: A Bittersweet Harvest	235
5.1. The many faces of reconciliation and their many implications	237
5.2. Canada: continuity and reconciliation rhetoric hand in hand	247
5.3. Reconciliation winning over continuity in Hungarian transitional justice jurisprudence	256
5.4. Indigenous Peoples in the maze of reconciliation: the suppressed subject revisited	268
5.5. Conclusion: the unfulfilled promise of reconciliation	285

CONCLUSION	301
------------	-----

Bibliography	309
---------------------	-----

Index	343
--------------	-----