

Globalization and Regionalization in Socialist and Post-Socialist Economies focuses on the ways in which the processes of integration and harmonization of socialist and post-socialist economies in the global economy are shaped in important ways by the specific characteristics of actors, institutions, and places. The chapters exemplify a kind of relational analysis that shows how what we think of as the global economy and the post-socialist condition is always mediated through regional practices, actors, and institutions.

John Pickles is the Earl N. Phillips Distinguished Professor of International Studies in the Department of Geography at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, USA. His main research interests are in regional economic transformation in Eastern Europe, the political economy of European integration, geographies of the global apparel industry, and cultural studies. He has published numerous articles in these fields, as well as several books, including A History of Spaces: Cartographic Reason, Mapping, and the Geo-Coded World and State and Society in Post-Socialist Economies.
