

CONTENTS

| | |
|---|-----|
| Preface | vii |
| Introduction | 1 |
| CHAPTER | |
| I. The Czechs and Slovaks and Their Leaders on the Eve of the War | 10 |
| II. The Russian and British Connections | 35 |
| III. The Emergence of the Independence Movement | 60 |
| IV. The Organization of the Czech Independence Movement by Émigrés Abroad, and Setbacks at Home | 75 |
| V. Plans for the Future of Central Europe, and the Struggle for Control of the Independence Movement | 110 |
| VI. The Spring and Early Summer of 1917, At Home and Abroad | 159 |
| VII. Peace Overtures, Propaganda, and the Building of the Czechoslovak Army | 180 |
| VIII. The Bolshevik Revolution | 207 |
| IX. The Czech Bolshevik Attempt to Control the Army Corps, the Retreat from the Ukraine, and the Peace of Brest-Litovsk | 235 |
| X. The Home Front, Congresses in Rome and Prague, and the Increasing Importance of the Army Abroad | 251 |
| XI. Masaryk's Journey to America | 271 |
| XII. The Origins of the Conflict Between the Czechoslovak Army and the Bolsheviks | 304 |
| XIII. Czechoslovak Resistance to the Bolsheviks, and the Decision to Intervene | 339 |

| | |
|---|-----|
| XIV. The Quest for Recognition, the Fight with the Bolsheviks, and the Limited Extent of Allied Help | 377 |
| XV. The Declaration of Independence | 417 |
| XVI. The New State at the Paris Peace Conference | 435 |
| XVII. Those Who Fought in Russia and Siberia | 466 |
| XVIII. Reflection, Recapitulation, and Aftermath | 487 |
| Notes | 507 |
| Bibliography | 611 |
| Index | 649 |