

'Sure to stimulate a long-overdue reawakening of interest in methodological choice and its consequences in economic geography ... the contributors to this volume have performed an incredibly valuable service on behalf of economic geographers everywhere.'

Professor Meric S. Gertler, University of Toronto, Canada

In the last two decades, economic geography has experienced a number of fundamental, theoretical and methodological shifts. Uniquely, Politics and Practice in Economic Geography explores these transformations in the context of both the realities and the ideals of research practice in the discipline.

Wide-ranging and provocative, the collection explores:

- the connections between research practice, policy and politics;
- positionality, power and research ethics;
- the methodological implications of critical realist, post-structural and feminist theories;
- qualitative and ethnographic methodologies;
- the role and significance of quantitative methods;
- the rationale and use of case study approaches;
- the methodological connections between the economic geography and fields like neoclassical economics, economic sociology, and economic anthropology.

Leading researchers examine a range of substantive methodological issues and challenges in the context of their own work, making a distinctive contribution to economic-geographical debate and practice. This is an essential primer for all students and researchers of economic geography, and beyond.
