

Introducing Human Geographies is a comprehensive, stimulating and innovative introduction to human geography. This second edition has been thoroughly revised and updated to build upon the success of the acclaimed first edition. Now in full colour and with sixteen new chapters, discussion points and glossary definitions in the margin, it is even more accessible.

Part one discusses the principal ideas through which human geographers understand and shape their subject.

Part two examines each of the main sub-fields:

- cultural geography
- development geography
- economic geography
- environmental geography
- historical geography
- political geography
- rural geography
- social geography
- urban geography.

Part three demonstrates how different thematic interests are combined in cutting-edge human geographical debates.

Introducing Human Geographies continues to be the essential textbook for first year undergraduate geography students taking introductory courses in human geography.

PAUL CLOKE is Professor of Human Geography at the University of Bristol, UK.

PHILIP CRANG is Reader in Human Geography at Royal Holloway, University of London, UK.

MARK GOODWIN is Professor of Human Geography at the University of Exeter, UK.

Praise for the first edition:

'The key aspects of Introducing Human Geographies are its breadth and unique structure. It is THE text for first year students who are looking to understand the wide range of initial approaches used in contemporary human geography.'

Lawrence Berg, Okanagan University College, Canada

'There is no doubt that both the contributors and the editors have given considerable and commendable thought to the presentation of ideas and material and taken care to try to ensure that these are accessible to their target audience.'

Ray Hudson, University of Durham, UK

'Excellent book – the best first year introduction to human geography I have seen.'

John Connell, University of Sydney, Australia
