

Contents

FOREWORD	ix
PREFACE	xiv
O·N·E WHAT IS POLITICAL JUDGMENT?	1
Why we should inquire	1
The concept of judgment in the history of political philosophy: brief survey	4
Scope of the inquiry	6
How to proceed	8
T·W·O POSSIBLE AVENUES OF INQUIRY	11
Arendt: politics and the appeal to Kantian aesthetics	12
Gadamer: hermeneutics and the appeal to Aristotelian ethics	19
Habermas: an ethics of communication	25
T·H·R·E·E KANT'S CONCEPT OF TASTE	31
Transcendental philosophy and the judging subject	32
Taste, aesthetic and political	34
Aesthetic judgment and moral respect	59
From taste to politics: Kant's rejection of prudence	63

viii CONTENTS

F·O·U·R	ARISTOTLE'S CONCEPT OF PRUDENCE	72
	Judging and judging-with: sympathy as an essential moment of judgment	72
	Judgment and friendship	79
F·I·V·E	JUDGMENT AND RHETORIC	83
	Aristotle: deliberation, rhetoric, and judgment	83
	Kant: judgment versus rhetoric	97
S·I·X	WITH SYMPATHY AND DETACHMENT: HORIZONS OF A COMPREHENSIVE PERSPECTIVE	102
	Formal and substantive conditions of judgment	103
	Judgment and responsibility	109
	Friendship versus love: Arendt and the Eichmann case	119
	Storytelling and narrative truth	125
S·E·V·E·N	TOWARDS A THEORY OF POLITICAL JUDGMENT	129
	Practices	130
	Persons	135
	Communities	138
	Means, ends, and identity	144
E·I·G·H·T	CLOSING REFLECTIONS	153
	NOTES	168
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	188
	INDEX	194