

Introduction: Everyday Life and Recent History – A New Field of Ethnological Research	7
1. A Culture of Shortage: Citizens' Living Standards as an Instrument of Political Manipulation	17
Forty years of consumer training – Disaster: A convenient starting point – The marginalisation of private trade and crafts – A bureaucratic, producer-controlled market – Barometers of the political mood: Sugar and butter – "Temporary meat shortages": The chronic ailment of the system – The whimsical generosity of the authorities: Imports – The realm of alcoholic oblivion – Selective egalitarianism: Branch privileges and rationing coupons – Princesses behind the counters – A retreat to the canteen – The jungle of industrial goods – Ambitions and imitations – Refrigerators and nails – Paper: A politically sensitive product – Woe betide the sick and travellers! – An expedition to the "Pewex" – The charm of colourful plastic – Persuasion and fantasy – The legacy of the shortage culture: The psychological burden
2. A Creeping Darkness: The Indoctrination of Secondary School Students in the 1940s	63
Ill-fated indoctrination – Postwar poverty and illusions – Young generation of the 1940s – Returning heroes – Western broadcasts and their listeners – More oppression – Belongers and non-belongers – While paying lip-service... – School of newspeak
3. A Retreat to the Cinema: The Reception of Western Films by the Younger Generation under Stalinism	91
The young postwar cinema goer – The celluloid past – Very British... – Shadowed by the Vichy censor – Stillborn hopes – Pop-tunes from the forbidden world – Roar of the Hollywood lion – Dull and cruel – Polish disillusionment – Film Arcadia
4. Profession and Propaganda: University Education in the Grip of Ideology and Poverty	115
Politically corrects and incorrects – Old and new universities – Supervisors of loyalty – Studies remodelled – Military classes – Fading zeal
5. More Isolation than Integration: Students in the Cultural Landscape of Postwar University Towns	135

Object of communist hatred: Cultural tradition – Old city-dwellers – Cracow under the heel –
How to tame students? – Propaganda versus religion: A backfire – City-dwellers and newcomers:
An uneasy coexistence – Dance campaign – Popular mythology of the West

6. Political Protest and Snobbery: Fashion among Cracow Students in the Early 1950s 157

The ideological battlefield: Entertainment and fashion – Dull and drab – Western military clothes
– The network of informal peddlers – Bazaar folklore – Second-hand style – Trousers: A challenge for the tailor – Political incorrectness: Hairstyles – Flagging revolutionary spirit

7. Hiking, Mountaineering and Speleology : The Subculture of Escapism 177

To flee and forget – Under the tent canvas – Code and style – The Tatras closed off and controlled
– The lure of faraway mountains – Bureaucrats and compromises

8. A Mechanical Fetish: Social Frustrations, Political Conformism and Private Cars 197

Bureaucrats in their embellished limousines – Motorcycles for work heroes – A graceless design from the East – Dreams under control – The objects of social status: The scooter – Technical backfire: The Syrena – "Cheap and affordable", but rather tiny... – Car-fans in the bureaucratic trap – A humiliating visit to a garage – A useful vehicle or a prestigious toy?

9. Drab Paradise: Towns in the Governance Philosophy and Practice of Postwar Poland 221

The key to power among ruins – A selective reconstruction policy – The suppression of spontaneous initiatives – Minimalism by design – Dreams and frustrations – The younger generation's exodus from the town centres – The peasant workforce – The marginalisation of the provinces – A pyramid of privilege

10. Poland's Closest Neighbours: Official Communist Stereotypes and Popular Myths 263

The immobility of the "fraternal" system – The timid exchange of professionals – Exotic
Czechoslovakia – Budapest folly – Obedient and uniformed – Arrogant Yugos – Shopping menace – Politically correct Germans – Seeds of xenophobia – "Lazy and poor"

11. Eight Years Later: Back from the Planet of Apes? 285

Bibliography 293