About the Contributors

Arnd Bauerkämper is a fellow at the Free University of Berlin. His recent publications include (as co-editor, respectively) "Junkerland in Bauernhand"? Durchführung, Auswirkungen und Stellenwert der Bodenreform in der Sowjetischen Besatzungszone (Stuttgart: Steiner 1996); Gesellschaft ohne Eliten? Führungsgruppen in der DDR (Berlin: Metropol 1997); and Doppelte Zeitgeschichte. Deutsch-deutsche Beziehungen 1945–1990. Festschrift für Christoph Kleßmann zum 60. Geburtstag (Bonn: Dietz 1998).

Benjamin Frommer is assistant professor of history at Northwestern University. He is currently revising his manuscript, "National Cleansing: Retribution against Nazi Collaborators in Postwar Czechoslovakia."

Eagle Glassheim is assistant professor of history at Princeton University. His research interests include the resettlement of the Bohemian borderlands after postwar expulsion of the Sudeten Germans from Czechoslovakia.

Krystyna Kersten is professor at the Polish Academy of Sciences in Warsaw. She has written several books and numerous articles about migration as a consequence of World War II; communist rule in Poland; Polish foreign policy between 1939 and 1945; Polish–Jewish relations; and the Intelligentsia. She was also the member of a parliamentary commission researching wrongdoings under Communism.

Jerzy Kochanowski works at the Germana Historical Institute in Warsaw and Historical Institute of Warsaw University. His areas of interest include the history of Germans—those being former Polish citizens ("ethnic" Germans, Volkdeutschen); the German POWs in postwar Poland; and the Poles coming from the eastern territories of prewar Poland.

Claudia Kraft is coauthor of a several volumes that use sources from Polish archives concerning the expulsion of Germans from Poland after World War II, and she has published articles about nineteenth- and twentieth-century Polish history. In 2001, she is working on a project comparing the ways Poland and Spain have come to terms with the past after authoritarian regimes of the twentieth centuries.

Mark Kramer is the director of the Harvard Project on Cold War Studies at Harvard University and a senior associate of Harvard's Davis Center for Russian Studies. He is the author of Crisis in Czechoslovakia, 1968: The Prague Spring and the Soviet Invasion as well as two forthcoming books, and is the editor of The Collapse of the Soviet Union. He also was the translator and American editor of The Black Book of Communism.

Stanisław Jankowiak is a lecturer and researcher at Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań, Poland. His research focuses on the contemporary history of Poland and Polish-German relationships in the postwar period.
