

CONTENTS

General editors' preface	page v
List of maps, tables, and figures	xiv
Preface to Volume 6	xvii
List of abbreviations	xix
Introduction	I
by HERBERT FRANKE, Universität München, Emeritus , and DENIS TWITCHETT, Princeton University, Emeritus
The Late T'ang balance of power	3
The frontier	7
Foreigners	11
Vassals and overlords	14
Multistate system	16
Treaty relations	18
Modes of government	21
Multilinguality	30
The Han Chinese under alien domination	36
I The Liao	43
by DENIS TWITCHETT and KLAUS-PETER TIETZE
Introduction	43
The predynastic Khitan	44
The background of A-pao-chi's rise to power	53
The rise of A-pao-chi	56
A-pao-chi becomes the new khaghan and ascends the throne	60
The succession crisis and the reign of T'ai-tsung	68
The succession of Shih-tsung	75
The development of government institutions	76
Relation with regimes in China	80
The reign of Mu-tsung, 951-969	81

The reign of Ching-tsung, 969-982: confrontation with Sung	84
The regency of Empress Dowager Ch'eng-t'ien	87
Changes in internal government	91
Foreign relations	98
The reign of Hsing-tsung	114
The reign of Tao-tsung	123
The reign of T'ien-tso and the collapse of the Liao	139
Final disaster	149
 2 The Hsi Hsia	 154
by RUTH DUNNEL, Kenyon College
Introduction	154
The ethnogenesis of the Tangut people	155
The surrender to T'ang and settlement in the Ordos	158
The end of the T'ang	161
The Tanguts during the Wu-tai period	164
The Tangut move toward independence, 982-1002	168
Liang-chou and Tangut expansion into Ho-hsi	172
The rise of the Tibetan Tsung-ko dynasty	173
Li Te-ming, 1004-1032	176
Ho-hsi after the Tangut conquest	179
Li Yüan-hao (Wei-ming Nang-hsiao, Ching-tsung), 1032-1048	180
The succession to Wei-ming Yüan-hao	189
A state in peril: the reigns of I-tsung (1048-1068), Hui-tsung (1068-1086), and Ch'ung-tsung to 1100	191
The reign of Hui-tsung (1068-1086)	193
Hsia comes of age: Ch'ung-tsung (1086-1139) and Jen-tsung (1140-1193)	197
The last years of the Hsia state and the Mongolian conquest	205
 3 The Chin dynasty	 215
by HERBERT FRANKE
General remarks	215
The Jurchen people and their predynastic history	216
The reign of A-ku-ta and the founding of the Chin dynasty	220
From war to coexistence: Chin-Sung relations before the treaty of 1142	226
The political history of Chin after 1142	235
The annihilation of Chin, 1215-1234	259

Government structure	265
Social structure	277
Ethnic groups	279
Economic conditions	291
Scholarship, literature, and the arts	304
Religious life	313
Conclusion	319
4 The rise of the Mongolian empire and Mongolian rule in north China	321
by THOMAS ALLSEN, Trenton State College
Mongolia and Temüjin, ca. 1150–1206	321
Chinggis khan and the early Mongolian state, 1206–1227	342
The organization of the empire: the reigns of Ögödei and Güyüg	365
The empire at its apogee: the reign of Möngke, 1251–1259	390
Epilogue: The empire on the eve of civil war	411
5 The reign of Khubilai khan	414
by MORRIS ROSSABI, City University of New York, Columbia University
The early years	414
Khubilai and China, 1253–1259	418
Khubilai versus Arigh Böke	422
Foreign expansion	429
Social and economic policies	445
Khubilai as emperor of China	454
Khubilai and religion	457
Khubilai and Chinese culture	465
Preservation of the Mongolian heritage	471
Economic problems in later years	473
The regime of Sangha and economic and religious abuses	478
Disastrous foreign expeditions	482
Khubilai's last years	488
6 Mid-Yüan politics	490
by HSIAO CH'I-CH'ING, University of Singapore
Introduction	490
The reign of Temür khaghan (Emperor Ch'eng-tsung), 1294–1307	492

Temür's succession	494
The conservator of Khubilai's achievements	496
Signs of decline	498
The transition to peace	501
The dominance of Empress Bulukhan	504
The reign of Khaishan (Emperor Wu-tsung), 1307-1311	505
Administrative anomalies	507
The "new deals"	510
The reign of Ayurbarwada khaghan (Emperor Jen-tsung), 1311-1320	513
The reign of Shidebala khaghan (Emperor Ying-tsung), 1320-1323	527
The coup d'état at Nan-p'o	532
The reign of Yesün Temür khaghan (Emperor T'ai-ting), 1323-1328	535
The reign of Tugh Temür (Emperor Wen-tsung), 1328- 1332	541
The failure of the succession arrangements	556
The period in retrospect	557
7 Shun-ti and the end of Yüan rule in China by JOHN DARDESS, University of Kansas	561
Yüan China at the accession of Toghön Temür (Shun-ti)	561
Toghön Temür's enthronement and Bayan's chancellorship, 1333-1340	566
Toghtō and his opposition, 1340-1355	572
The disintegration of the Yüan	580
Conclusion: Why did the Yüan dynasty fall?	584
8 The Yüan government and society by ELIZABETH ENDICOTT-WEST, Harvard University	587
Government	587
Society	608
9 Chinese society under Mongol rule, 1215-1368 by FREDERICK W. MOTE, Princeton University, Emeritus	616
The Mongolian period in Chinese history	616
The population of Yüan China	618
Social-psychological factors	622
Social classes: traditional and new elites	627

Confucian households	635
Diffusion of elite roles	638
The meaning of the Yüan drama in Yüan period social history	640
Cultural diversity	643
The Western Asians' changing relationship to the Chinese elite	644
Social classes: sub-elite and commoner	648
Other aspects of Yüan dynasty social history	657
Households in bondage	661
Bibliographical essays	665
Bibliography	727
Glossary—Index	777