

CONTENTS

Process of International Negotiation (PIN) group members are marked with an asterisk.

About the Processes of International Negotiation (PIN) Program xi

Acknowledgments xv

Negotiations in Transitions: A Conceptual Framework 1

*I. William Zartman, * Johns Hopkins University SAIS*

Tunisia: Beyond the Ideological Cleavage: Something Else 50

*Abdelwahab ben Hafaiedh, MERC, and I. William Zartman, *
Johns Hopkins University SAIS*

Egypt: Can a Revolution Be Negotiated? 80

Aly El Raggal and Heba Raouf Ezzat, Cairo University

Yemen: Negotiations with Tribes, States, and Memories 116

Abdullah Hamidaddin, King's College

Algeria: The Negotiations That Aren't 145

Hugh Roberts, ICG/Tufts University

Morocco: The Struggle for Political Legitimacy 182

Amy Hamblin, Johns Hopkins University SAIS

Bahrain: The Dynamics of a Conflict 209

Roel Meijer, Clingendael, and Maarten Danckaert, European-Bahraini Organization for Human Rights

Libya: Negotiations for Transition 249

Karim Mezran, Atlantic Council, and Alice Alunni, Durham University

Syria: Aspirations and Fragmentations 291

Samir Aita, Cercle des Economistes Arabes

NATO: The Process of Negotiating Military Intervention in Libya 332

Johannes Theiss, Collège d'Europe

Serbia: Moderation as a Double-Edged Sword	364
Siniša Vuković, Johns Hopkins University SAIS
South Africa: Negotiated Transition to Democracy	392
Mark Anstey,* Nelson Mandela University
Lessons for Theory: Negotiating for Order and Legitimacy	420
I. William Zartman,* Johns Hopkins University SAIS
Lessons for Policy	439
Fen Osler Hampson,* Carleton University, and Bessma Momani, Waterloo University
Contributors	463
Index	467