

close fellows, past and present, have been incredibly supportive of my work, including involving me in informative research trips and workshops. Special thanks are due to Abdallah Ali, Sara Bazoobandi, Doris Carrion, Kristina Coates Ullrichsen, Tim Eaton, Hassan Hassan, Jane Kinninmont, Neil Qualliam, Claire Spencer and Helen Twiss.

Away from London, I must also thank institutions that kindly hosted me while I conducted field research: the Georgetown Center for Contemporary Arab studies in Washington, DC; the Orient Institut in Beirut; and the King Fahd Center for Research and Islamic Studies in Riyadh. I am also extremely grateful to the following, who, in various ways, supported, helped and facilitated my research: Dania Akkad, Malik al-Abed, the Arab Peace Center

Acknowledgements vi

List of actors and abbreviations ix

Map of Syria xiv

Introduction 1

- 1 Syria and the Middle East on the eve of civil war 10
 - 2 The Arab Spring comes to Syria 40
 - 3 Assad must stand aside? The international community's ambivalent response 59
 - 4 International institutions and the slide to war 83
 - 5 A legitimate representative? Supporting and subverting Syria's political opposition 105
 - 6 'Arm the rebels!' Backing the armed opposition 125
 - 7 To the hilt: Assad's allies dig in 147
 - 8 No red lines: the question of western military intervention 168
 - 9 Descent into chaos: stalemate and the rise of ISIS 189
 - 10 Enter Russia: Putin raises the stakes 213
- Conclusion: The war that everyone lost 232

Notes 240

Bibliography 272

Index 289