Michael Röhrig, Martin Schreiber and Heike Werner – once more proved invaluable. I very much thank them all for their great engagement. Further thanks are due to Oliver Groll of the Chamber of Industry and Commerce, Wolfgang Bach of the State Chancellery of the Saarland, and Volker Linneweber, the President of the University of the Saarland for their illustrative and detailed introductory contributions. I would also like to thank our editor Stefanie Evita Schaefer from the publisher Campus Frankfurt/New York for her practical support and her many valuable ideas. Of great importance and indispensable was the work undertaken by Aline Maldener and Michael Röhrig from the Chair of Cultural and Media History who not only standardized the manuscripts with great care and indefatigable attention, but also offered editorial suggestions. Special thanks are due to Anna Richter, a translator and editor in Berlin, who played a vital role in the production of the volume. She translated the introduction and the volume overall greatly benefited from her editorial experience and numerous linguistic and editorial improvements.
