

Contents

1	Introduction . . . . .	1
2	How Politics Change on the Web . . . . .	5
2.1	Online Communication: From Accessibility to Content Proliferation . . . . .	6
2.2	Beyond Communication: The Role of the Web in Politics . . . . .	7
2.2.1	Can the Internet ‘Move’ the Vote? . . . . .	8
2.3	Media Audiences and the Web: From Passive Viewers to Active Content Producers . . . . .	9
2.4	Does the Internet Change Politics? . . . . .	11
2.4.1	From Communication to Relationship: The Web Is Not the TV . . . . .	12
2.4.2	Essential Features of the Internet Audience . . . . .	14
2.4.3	Traditional Advertising No Longer Works . . . . .	16
2.4.4	A Basic Rule Broken Time and Again . . . . .	17
2.4.5	The Most Important Rule for Good Online Communication . . . . .	18
2.5	Negative Comments Are Positive . . . . .	19
2.5.1	Careful: There Are No Secrets on the Web . . . . .	21
2.5.2	Start Early . . . . .	22
2.6	The Web Won’t Save Your Life . . . . .	23
2.7	The Web Is Not Free . . . . .	24
	References . . . . .	30
3	Building an Online Communication Strategy . . . . .	33
3.1	Introduction: Objectives and Phases of an Online Political Campaign . . . . .	33
3.2	Defining Which Actions to Take (and Which to Avoid) . . . . .	35
3.3	Objective One: Getting the Political Message Out . . . . .	37
3.3.1	Managing a Communication Crisis Online . . . . .	40
3.3.2	Defending Online Reputation: Legal Protection . . . . .	42
3.3.3	Negative Campaigning Online . . . . .	46

3.4	The Web as a Tool for Listening . . . . .	48
3.4.1	Monitoring Reputation Online . . . . .	48
3.4.2	Using the Web to Construct a Political Platform . . . . .	50
3.5	Objective Two: Boosting and Organizing Participation . . . . .	52
3.5.1	Online Participation . . . . .	52
3.5.2	Offline Participation . . . . .	55
3.5.3	The Paradigm Shift in Political Communication: From Persuasion to Mobilization . . . . .	56
3.5.4	How Volunteers Knocked on Five Million Doors in France's Presidential Elections . . . . .	58
3.5.5	Using the Web to Organize Participation . . . . .	60
3.5.6	Influencing the Agenda: New Forms of Organization for a New Political Situation . . . . .	63
3.6	Objective Three: Fundraising . . . . .	66
	References . . . . .	71
4	Online Communication Tools . . . . .	75
4.1	The Website . . . . .	75
4.1.1	The User Experience Design . . . . .	77
4.1.2	Organizing Content . . . . .	79
4.2	Social Media . . . . .	85
4.2.1	Organize the Complexity of Responses to Messages and Comments . . . . .	86
4.2.2	Moderating Comments . . . . .	87
4.2.3	Black-Hat Social Media . . . . .	89
4.2.4	Social-Media Security . . . . .	92
4.2.5	Facebook: A Key Tool for Building Relationships with Supporters . . . . .	93
4.2.6	Twitter: Indispensable for Getting in Contact with Influencers . . . . .	99
4.3	Email: The Most Important Vehicle for Encouraging Participation . . . . .	105
4.4	Online Advertising . . . . .	109
4.4.1	Creating an Effective Landing Page . . . . .	113
4.5	Managing Public Relations Online: From "Spray and Pray" to "Preciprocation" . . . . .	113
4.6	Search-Engine Marketing: Getting Found on the Web . . . . .	116
4.7	Web Analytics: Using the Web to Save Resources and Obtain Better Results . . . . .	120
4.7.1	Defining Strategic Objectives . . . . .	122
4.7.2	What Can Be Measured? . . . . .	123
4.7.3	Before Hitting "Send," Test, Test, Test . . . . .	126
4.7.4	Big Data and Political Communication . . . . .	128
	References . . . . .	134

---

5 Producing Content that Creates Participation and Consensus . . . . .	139
5.1 Evaluating the Potential of Political Content . . . . .	140
5.1.1 Content People Will Want to Share . . . . .	141
5.1.2 Content That Creates Consensus . . . . .	142
5.1.3 Creating an Editorial Plan . . . . .	146
5.2 Writing for the Web . . . . .	149
5.2.1 From Posts to Tweets: Various Web Formats . . . . .	151
5.2.2 Responding to Criticism . . . . .	154
5.3 Photographs: A Picture Is Worth a Thousand Words . . . . .	155
5.3.1 The Role of Photographs as a Tool for Political Change . . . . .	156
5.3.2 Photography and Social Media . . . . .	158
5.4 Using Graphics to Make Complex Content Understandable . . . . .	161
5.5 Using Video to Generate Interaction and Consensus . . . . .	167
5.5.1 Creating a Successful Video . . . . .	169
References . . . . .	175
In Closing . . . . .	179
Keywords . . . . .	181

The purpose of this book is to explain how to use the Internet to help political parties increase their political influence. It is not about how to become a political party or how to produce political policies. It is about how to use the Internet to increase political participation. Many people use the Internet to express their opinions, and share their points of view, but they do not have a clear understanding of what they are doing. This book will help you understand what you are doing and how to use the Internet to help your political party succeed.

This book is designed for political parties that want to use the Internet to help them increase their political influence. It is not about how to become a political party or how to produce political policies. It is about how to use the Internet to help your political party succeed. This book will help you understand what you are doing and how to use the Internet to help your political party succeed.

This book is designed for political parties that want to use the Internet to help them increase their political influence. It is not about how to become a political party or how to produce political policies. It is about how to use the Internet to help your political party succeed. This book will help you understand what you are doing and how to use the Internet to help your political party succeed.