

Contents

List of Figures, Maps, and Tables	xi
1. Introduction: Markets in Economics and History	1
1.1. Markets, Their Historiography, and Some Major Assumptions	1
Some Assumptions and Received Wisdom	3
1.2. On the Modernity of Markets: The Verdict of Recent Historical Research	8
Recent Studies on the Rise of Factor Markets	11
Recent Historical Literature on the Relation between Markets, Wealth, and Freedom	14
1.3. A New Approach to Markets: This Book	18
Elements Investigated in the Book	24
1.4. Cases of Market Economies	29
Possible Cases of Market Economies	30
The Cases Investigated in this Book	35
2. Markets in an Early Medieval Empire: Iraq, 500–1100	41
2.1. The Rough Contours of Economic Development	41
2.2. Social Revolts and the Growth of Factor Markets from the Fifth to the Mid-Eighth Century	46
Social Revolts and Societal Balance	47
Land and Lease Markets	51
Labourers and Labour Markets	56
Credit and Financial Markets	59
2.3. Dynamic Factor Markets and Growing Social Inequality from the Late Eighth to the Tenth Century	60
Accumulation and Effects in Land and Lease Markets	61
Free Labourers and Growing Number of Slaves	68
2.4. Long-Run Effects on Economy, Politics, and Society from the Ninth to the Eleventh Century	78
The Chronology of Economic Decline	78
Causes of the Economic Decline	82
3. Markets in Medieval City-States: The Centre and North of Italy, 1000–1500	97
3.1. The Emergence of Factor Markets in the Eleventh to Thirteenth Century	97
A Context of Relative Equity	98
The Early Rise of Land and Lease Markets	101
The Early Rise of Labour and Financial Markets	107

3.2. Organization, Context, and Effects of Dynamic Factor Markets, Early Fourteenth to Mid-Fifteenth Century	111
The Mezzadria System	114
Increasingly Distorted Labour Markets and Coercion of Labour	119
3.3. The Changing Social Context of Markets: Power and Property in the Fifteenth and Sixteenth Centuries	124
The Growth of Burgher Landownership	124
Growing Financial Markets and Inequality of Wealth Distribution	126
Impotent Revolts, Professional Soldiers, and Growing Power of Market Elites	129
3.4. Effects on Economy, Agriculture, and Demography	134
The Regional Variations	138
Wealth and Elite Dominance	140
4. Markets in Late Medieval and Early Modern Principalities: The Low Countries, 1100–1800	145
4.1. The Social Context before and during the Emergence of Factor Markets, from the Twelfth to the Fourteenth Century	145
4.2. The Emergence of Factor Markets in the Thirteenth to Fifteenth Century	154
Land and Lease Markets	154
Labour Markets	159
Money, Credit, and Capital Markets	164
4.3. The Functioning and Effects of Dynamic Factor Markets from the Fifteenth to the Mid-Sixteenth Century	170
Accumulation through Land and Lease Markets	171
The Further Growth of Labour and Capital Markets	174
The Social Effects of Extensive and Dynamic Factor Markets	177
4.4. Effects of Dynamic Factor Markets from the Mid-Sixteenth to the Seventeenth Century	188
Growing Economic Inequality	192
Growing Political Inequality	195
Stagnation of the Economy and Decline of Welfare	200
5. Epilogue—Markets in Modern States: England, the United States, and Western Europe, 1500–2000	208
5.1. England and Its North American Colonies, 1500–1800	209
The Rise of Factor Markets to Dominance	209
The Social and Political Context	211
Dominant Factor Markets	215
The American Colonies	218
England as the Leading Economy	222
5.2. The Decline of England and the Rise of the United States, 1800–1950	223
Inequality, Counter-Reaction, and Stagnation in England	225
Freedom, Equity, and Rising Factor Markets in the United States	229
5.3. The Western World Brought in Sync and Dominated by Factor Markets, since 1950	237
Northwest Europe Brought in Sync with the American Cycle	245

6. Conclusion: The Fundamental Incompatibility of Market Economies with Long-Run Prosperity, Equity, and Broad Participation in Decision Making	251
6.1. The Cycle	251
The Positive Phases of the Cycle	251
A Closer Inspection of the Negative Phases of the Cycle	255
6.2. The Cycle, Its Specific Aspects, and Theories of Long-Run Development	259
Market Economies and Inequality	260
Possible Counterbalances and the Role of the State	265
Financial Markets and Capitalism	271
Rise and Decline	274
6.3. The Cycle in Time and Space	276
Early Market Economies and Their Decline	276
Urban Centres and Rural Hinterlands	279
Regional Differences	281
The Growing Scale and Influence of Market Cores	284
Bibliography	289
Index Locorum	319
Index of Names	323
General Index	324