

Contents

Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	1
Part I Representing Politics
1 Political Bias	21
Why does bias matter?	24
Defining bias	26
Types of bias	29
The Bad News studies	36
Manufacturing Consent	40
Critiques of bias research	42
Constructing reality?	44
Conclusion	46
2 Telling Tales: The Reporting of Politics	49
Frames versus biases	50
Producing news	52
Genres and political coverage	58
Telling political stories	62
We the people	69
Explaining political stories	73
Conclusion	75
3 It's Just for Fun: Politics and Entertainment	77
Political satire: politics as deluded and corrupt	81
Politics as conspiracy	90
Entertainment as propaganda	93
The politics of identity: from soap opera to sport	95
Conclusion	99
4 Media Effects	101
Seeing is believing?	105
Under the influence?	107

Press and voting behaviour	108
Television and voting behaviour	112
Influence beyond the ballot box	113
Elite effects	118
Media consumption in context	120
Conclusion	127
Part II The Political Economy of Mass Media
5 State Control and State Propaganda	131
Systems of control	133
Censorship	135
Secrecy	139
Propaganda	140
Regulation	146
Comparing media systems	153
Conclusion	157
6 Conglomerate Control: Media Moguls and Media Power	159
Media empires	161
Ownership and control	167
The power of Rupert Murdoch	167
Readers and viewers	175
Advertisers	177
Reconsidering media power	180
Conclusion	183
7 Watchdogs or Lapdogs? The Politics of Journalism	185
The power of the spin doctor?	187
The rise of churnalism	191
Investigative journalism and the 'dumbing down' of news	192
Models of journalism	195
Conclusion	206
8 Dream Worlds: Globalization and the Webs of Power	209
Global players	211
A history of the future	213
Globalization or internationalization?	218
Conglomerates, governments and identities	220
Conclusion	230

Part III Mass Media and Democracy

9 Transforming Political Communication? The Rise of Political Marketing and Celebrity Politics	235
Packaging politics	237
Packaging techniques	239
Arguing about marketing	242
The rise of the celebrity politician	244
The critique of celebrity politics	248
In defence of celebrity politics	250
Judging by appearance	254
Politics as media performance	256
Conclusion	260
10 New Media, New Politics?	261
Transforming politics? A five-step programme	262
E-democracy: practice and promises	265
The argument for e-democracy	270
The argument against e-democracy	271
New media and politics	273
Conclusion	282
11 Power and Mass Media	283
Discursive power	285
Access power	287
Resource power	288
Theories of media power	289
Conclusion	301
12 A Free Press: Democracy and Mass Media	303
Liberal democracy and the free press	305
The value of free speech	308
The limits to free speech	309
Free press/free market?	311
Democratic regulation?	315
Conclusion	327
Conclusion	329
Bibliography	335
Index	369